STENOGRAPHER LURED TO DEATH BY WORK OFFER

Coroner's Examination Reveals Ghastly Details of Murder—Suspect Wolter Believed to Have Engineered Wholesale Abductions.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Inspector McCafferty of the detective bureau announced to-day that a complete statement had been obtained from Kate Mueller, pseudowife of Albert Wolter, that would convict the youth of the murder of Ruth Wheeler.

"Our case is complete," said the inspector: "We will prove that this poor little girl went to seek work from Wolter, that he attacked her, that she fought, that he choked her until she was unconscious. Then the most horrible of all happened—he burned her while she was still alive, though unconscious."

PRISONER PROTESTS HE IS INNOCENT.

Information obtained by the police to-day indicated that Wolter had been concerned, despite his youth, in a far-reaching "white slave" traffic. A man answering his description rented rooms last summer from a woman who keeps a boarding house in West Thirty-fourth street. The rooms were occupied by two girls believed to have been Jennie Kohn and Annie Goldstein. Annie Goldstein was rescued from the hands of Jennie Kohn, but she again ran away from her home in East Second street.

The Kohn girl lived in the East Twenty-fourth street boarding house only a short time and then vanished. The police have warned from the foster father of Wolter that the youth has a vicious nature and is very ill tempered. He said that young Adelaide Wheeler, the sister of Ruth Wheeler, who trailed the missing girl and finally brought about the arrest of Wolter, told today how she had taken hold of the case and followed it until Ruth's body was found. Wolter and Kate Mueller might not be now under arrest if Adelaide Wheeler had not taken the matter in her own hands.

The police would not arrest Wolter until she insisted on it with such vigor that they could not refuse. In court, when he was arraigned on a charge of abduction before the child's body was discovered, the police declared they had no evidence against Wolter. Adelaide Wheeler pleaded with the magistrate, and he held Wolter, and a few hours later the body was found. She told of taking up the search and going to Wolter's flat.

Wolter, the son of a piano maker, a boy with a good education, who left his home because of the objection of his parents to his living in the same apartment with the Mueller girl has been put through the third degree with all that that terms signifies in Gotham. He continues in the face of evidence that points to his guilt that he is innocent.

Detectives working on the mystery learned to-day that fifteen young girls have been missed since January 19, and they began a further delving into the affair to see if their disappearance could be traced to Wolter.

The names of a number of girls with their addresses, including that of the victim, were found in a book in the possession of Wolter. The police believe that they are on the trail of a wholesale abduction plan of enormous scope.

The Mueller girl, who lived with Wolter is held by the police as a witness. Sharply questioned to-day she made two damaging admissions against Wolter.

First, she says, Wolter admitted to her that Ruth Wheeler had called on him at his apartment. Wolter has steadily denied

GIRL WHO WAS LURED TO HER DEATH BY "AD"

RUTH WHEELER

ALDRICH'S SON WEDS BOSTON SOCIETY GIRL

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

First of all the smart town and country events was the wedding today at Trinity Church of Winsome Dorothea Davenport, daughter of the George Davenports of Beacon street, to William T. Aldrich son of Senator and Mrs. Nelson W. Aldrich of Providence.

Miss Davenport is a decidedly pretty girl. She is tall and dark with a dash and charm about her which always makes her a centre of interest. Trinity Church was a perfect bower of Easter lilies and Spring blooms, an ideal setting for the youthful, white-robed bride and her arbs of pretty attendants.

Miss Davenport is a prominent member of the Vincent Club, and all her intimate friends in the exclusive organization were on hand to assist at the launching of their favorite on the matrimonial seas. Miss Aldrich, sister of the bridegroom, being some relation to Miss Gray and picturesque Eleanor Cotton were the attendants.

Miss Gray and Miss Cotton were sister debutantes of the bride, whom she made her initial bow two Winters ago. The nice all young and exceptionally good looking, so interest in the bridal cortege was not lacking.

Richard Steve Aldrich was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Robert P. S. Cole, Osborne, Ralph Weld, Gray and Russell H. Wheeler, Jr., of Boston; William Winthrop Aldrich, the bridegroom's brother of Providence; Philip Livingston Saltonstall, Jr., and Brockholst Matthews Smith all of New York; Rufus Ingalls Bishop, U. S. N. King and Francis Berrall Hoffman, Jr., all of New York.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann officiated and after the ceremony a reception and breakfast took place at the home of the bride's parents.

Gowns of Attendants.

The bride's attendants were gowned alike in daffodil yellow satin with overdrape of yellow tulle caught just at the train with a large bow of yellow satin. Their hats were of thin yellow hair, trimmed with yellow roses and black tulle. They each carried a large bouquet of violets.

The bride was in a beautifully modelled gown of white satin with sleeves and yoke of white lace, and a long enveloping veil of tulle.

Among the guests were the bridegroom's brother, now Black of Yale, a small black hat with chantecler plumes in it, Bishop Lawrence, mother and a beautiful gown of lavender embroidered satin and a large lavender hat trimmed with lavender plumes.

Governor and Mrs. Draper with their daughter, Miss Dorothy, were among the early arrivals. Mrs. Draper was in black Persian lamb coat, under which she had on a large black hat trimmed with a bird of Paradise aigrette. Miss Draper was in blue cloth and large black hat.

Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Jr., was a guest of the Aldrichs.

Miss Alice Soldez, who is to be a bridesmaid at the wedding, had on a small black sailor hat. She was with a number of Vincent girl friends, and they flocked to the gallery instead of occupying the guest pews. Miss Soldez was also in black.

Distinguished Guest List.

Miss Miriam Shaw was in green cloth and a large black hat, and Miss Linden also was with her was in dark blue cloth and a large blue hat. Miss Beaumont Dixey, daughter of the Charles Dixeys, was in a smart, blue serge suit, trimmed with chantecler satin and a picturesque chantecler hat.

CARPET WEAVERS PREPARE TO STRIKE

To-night President Michael A. Murphy of the U. T. U. and Organizer Morris of the United Textile Workers' Union, will be the speakers at a meeting of the Pawtucket Carpet Weavers' Union of Bonkary at No. 7 Warrenton street. The girls recently learned a statement that the company within the past two years has reduced wages more than 25 per cent. on many lines of work, and that their strike is to be a protest against further decreases.

ROOSEVELT CONDEMNS ASSASSINS

CAIRO, March 28.—Unaffected by the storm of protest from the Nationalists against his condemnation of their methods and principles, Theodore Roosevelt, in his address before the University of Egypt to-day—the most important event of his visit to Egypt—censured the entire Nationalist movement, and held the leaders of it directly responsible for the assassination of last month of Premier Boutros Pasha, who was killed by a student.

The excitement over the visit of the former President reached its crest when he delivered his speech. He was closely guarded—unknown to him—and in the audience was scattered a strong force of secret police. His subject was "The Futility of Political Assassination." The students of the university, many of whom are radical, listened attentively, at times applauding enthusiastically. The others of the audience, which included some of the best-known men, Egyptian and European, in the country, at times betrayed enthusiasm.

Mr. Roosevelt drew on the history of the United States for three examples of futile assassination—the three "martyr Presidents."

Commends British Rule.

About the university grounds there was a big crowd, drawn from the lower classes, the Nationalists being in the majority. Strong police guards kept them back and struggled hard to prevent congestion.

The fear that the occasion would be seized by the opponents of England's rule for a demonstration led the authorities to unusual activity. Mr. Roosevelt laid much stress on what he had seen and heard since he emerged from the jungle. He pictured the improvements in the land that have been made since the English took control, and summed up the benefits that accrue to a subject race under the guidance of such a nation as Great Britain.

He frequently compared the development of Egypt with the same work that the United States government is doing with the Indian borders and also compared the government of Egypt with that of the Philippines. Scant reference was made, however, to the storm of disapproval among the native radicals and progressives aroused by his strictures on them. As Mr. Roosevelt reached the progressive climaxes in his peroration, Sir Eldrid Gorst, the native advocates of that order broke into cheers.

The scene at the end of the address there was a silence that might have been construed as ominous.

Speech Is Cheered.

Mr. Roosevelt used much emphasis and frequently resorted to the gestures made familiar to Americans by his political tours. When he finished, there was a burst of applause that lasted for several minutes, echoed by cheering from the crowd beyond, which had heard only snatches of translations.

An interview between the former President and the editors of the native newspapers, of all shades of opinion, has resulted in a better feeling between Mr. Roosevelt and those whom he criticises. Practically without exception, the papers to-day speak highly of him, on the same lines that they sing his intentions, though differing from him in their views on Egypt's future affairs.

The program of Mr. Roosevelt to-day included besides the address at the university, two receptions and the dedication of the girls' new college of the American mission after luncheon at the mission with the Rev. Dr. Watson and his wife.

Gift From Syrians.

The Geographical Society delegation today was received by Mr. Roosevelt. For some time he chatted with the scientists, discussing principally the land through which he traveled on his hunting trip and also answering many questions regarding America. He was presented with a silver box of exquisite workmanship, the gift of the Syrians of Cairo, a delegation of whom he received.

Prince Ahmed Fouad, rector of the university and uncle of the Khedive, was the host of the former President at dinner to-night.

To-morrow Mr. Roosevelt will have for his guests at tea Prince Eitel Frederick, second son of the Kaiser, and Princess Eitel, who are traveling here incognito.

This Commission Will Examine Mrs. Kelleher

DR. HENRY R. STEADMAN DR. GEORGE L. WALTON DR. EDWARD R. UTLEY

These three men have been appointed to test the sanity of the woman who is accused of being a wholesale poisoner.

LUNACY BOARD CHOSEN IN MRS. KELLEHER CASE

A lunacy commission was appointed today to examine Mary Kelleher, the Somerville woman, who is charged with poisoning six members of her family, including three of her small children. The appointment of the commission was announced by Judge William H. Stevens, one of the judges appointed to preside at the trial of Mrs. Kelleher.

The commission consists of Dr Henry R. Steadman of Taunton, Dr. George L. Walton of Boston and Dr. Edward R. Utley, physician of the East Cambridge jail, where Mrs. Kelleher is confined. Dr Steadman is connected with the Taunton Insane Asylum and Dr. Walton with the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The trial of Mrs. Kelleher was set to begin next Monday. If the commission decides she is insane she will go to an asylum, otherwise the trial will proceed.

Judge Stevens gave the commissioners instructions as to the law covering such examinations, in one of the rooms of the district attorney's office in East Cambridge, and they went directly to the jail, where they made their first examination of Mrs. Kelleher in the reception room.

Drs. Steadman and Walton were on the commission that examined Harry Pitts, the young man who killed Miss Harriet Hayden in Somerville, and they decided that he was sane. The other member of the commission, Dr. Utley, has already examined Mrs. Kelleher, and reported that in his opinion she is sane. The report of the commission is to be made before next Saturday.

RISKS LIFE TO STOP RUNAWAY

After endangering the lives of scores of children returning from school, a runaway horse was stopped in City square, Charlestown, this noon by William H. Breen, Jr., who was dragged fifty feet before he brought the frightened animal to a standstill.

The horse was owned by George Newhouse, provision dealer. While the driver was taking lunch in a restaurant the horse became frightened by the noise of an elevated train and ran. Young Breen ran into the street and managed to grab the horse's bridle and stopped the runaway after desperate work. Mr. Breen lives at No. 6 Waverly block.

D. B. RUSSELL NO. 3 BOBS UP WITH A CLAIM

Daniel Blake Russell No. 3 appeared on the scene in the famous will contest to-day. In a letter to the chief of police of Melrose he announced his arrival in Boston and stated that he would employ lawyers to look after his interests. No address was given in the letter, which was received to-day. The letter is as follows:

Back Bay, Boston,
March 26, 1910.

To Chief of police Melrose:

I am Daniel Blake Russell and can prove it William Russell.

I have been out West ever since I left Boston and have just arrived in Boston to look out after my father's estate. I shall employ lawyers to see that I get my rights. The other two claimants to the estate of Daniel Russell are frauds. I want you to notify William Russell at once not to give or pay any money out of father's estate, until it is settled. I am the right man and will have my rights.

(signed) DANIEL BLAKE RUSSELL.

P. S. Look out for by interests as I am the right man and do not want any frauds to get the money.

(signed) DANIEL BLAKE RUSSELL.

Forty-eight years old, son of Daniel Russell.

The letter was postmarked Back Bay station, Boston, March 27.

After reading the letter Acting Chief of Police Osborn E. Brown said: "Here's another Jake Daniel Blake Russell."

Daniel Blake Russell No. 2 will arrive in Boston from California to-morrow.

250 DEAD BY FIRE AT DANCE

BUDAPEST, March 28.—Two hundred and fifty men, women and children were killed last night, when, during a country ball, fire destroyed a barn at Ockocsin.

With their clothes afire the dancers fought to escape from the structure. Scores were trampled as the exits became clogged with bodies.

Fully 300 were injured.

The disaster came at the height of the festivities. The floor was crowded when the flames were first seen. In a moment the hundreds of dancers were fighting in one tangled mass.

LOOTER IS SPENDING LAVISHLY

George W. Coleman, the wrecker of the Cambridge National City Bank, has been trying to foment the United States Government, according to the reports that have been sent to Washington by Secret Service men who have been on the trail of the young man since he was liberated on bail.

Right under the nose of the Washington detectives Coleman has been repeating his experience as a high roller in Boston, spending money right and left in company with Miss Mamie Hightower of Kansas City, eating late suppers, flying about in automobiles—and getting the money for it all in a mysterious manner.

The detectives have reported to Washington that Coleman is still spending some of the loot of the closed bank and they are furious because they have so far been unable to gather into their net its confederates.

To Be Tried at Once.

It was because of this remarkable situation in the big bank robbery that United States District Attorney French was called to Washington, where he was in conference to-day with Attorney General Wickersham.

To cut short the wild career of Coleman, he is to be put on trial at once, as was told exclusively in the AMERICAN yesterday.

When Coleman arrived in Boston from the West and reached the Back Bay station he had $25 in his possession—a $20 gold piece and three $1 bills.

His father and uncle raised $50,000 bail, and immediately the young man began to assume a sort of nonchalant air about his troubles. Instead of remaining in seclusion, he apparently sought notoriety, giving out interviews that differed from day to day.

Father Stops Plan.

Then Miss Hightower reached here from the West and Coleman took out a license to marry her. Although facing a possible term in the Federal prison at Atlanta he announced that he was to be wedded to the girl. His father, a solid business man, put an end to that, forcing to give the young man up to the authorities if he persisted in his matrimonial program.

In the meantime Coleman was plentifully supplied with money and was persisting in most of his interviews that he had never been a victim of a bunco game.

Where did Coleman's money come from? His father did not give it to him. His lawyers did not furnish him with any money. Who did?

The Secret Service men kept their eyes open for a clue to this mystery and if they found one they kept it to themselves.

Aid From Bunco Gang?

They have been amazed at the life that Coleman has been living and they feel certain that he either had some of the bank's money hidden where he could obtain it or that some of those who financed him have come to his relief with the hope that by furnishing him at this time he would not squeal on them.

Coleman has been with Miss Hightower practically all the time since the cause to Boston. They have been seen together at various places by the detectives who have been on their trail, but so swift a pace have they enjoyed that their high speed automobiles that some of the time the detectives were unable to keep in sight.

United States District Attorney French heard Washington at 5 o'clock to-day for Boston. The Federal Court convenes to-morrow and there has been some talk of cases are out of the way Coleman will face a jury.

The Suffolk County Grand Jury comes in next Monday, and it is expected that there will be revelations in connection with the Coleman mystery after that.

Other arrests are expected to follow, now that the United States Government has been so wrought up over the bank wrecking.

PRINCETON STUDENT STOWAWAY ON LINER

PLYMOUTH, March 28.—Spwall Fredrick Camp, a student at Princeton University and the son of a banker of Watertown, N. Y., is on the Dutch Liner Princessin Sophie, on which he stowed away after a violent quarrel with his parents. For days the youth was watched to prevent an attempt at suicide. His presence on the ship was discovered when it was 400 miles out. Arrangements to land him at Cherbourg were made and an appeal for funds flashed to his father.

MELLEN AGAIN ASKS EMPLOYES TO TALK PEACE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 28.—A strike of 6,000 employes on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad is feared. The men have been asked by President Mellen to meet with officials again to-day in a last attempt at a settlement.

The committees and trainmen have been instructed by their general adjustment committee to meet with officials and if they do not take the wage dispute. They declare that no compromise or concession from their first demands will be accepted, and frankly state that a strike appears almost certain. The attitude of their representatives is said to be that the compromise offer made by the road has not been worth considering.

The last overture made by the company was a proposal to increase by 7 per cent. the wages of firemen, conductors and trainmen.

TWO DROWNED AS DORY OVERTURNS

MARBLEHEAD, March 28.—Swamped in a small dory while returning from The Jerry's Island near here, two men lost their lives early to-day and two others barely escaped. Fred L. Chase, thirty-six years old, of Bassett street, and Frank Lang, fifty-one, were the victims. Their two companions, who escaped, were John F. Peachey of Prospect street and Charles Cone of Beverly.

Peachey, more dead than alive, worked his way to the Marblehead police station and told the story of the accident. Chief Foss were held by the police while officers were sent down to investigate the tragedy. The bodies were found up on the beach at the island. Chase had been drowned, and Lanland died from exhaustion after making his way back to the island. The half-mile swim and the cold sapped Lang's strength.

The four men had gone to repair their lobster pots on the island, which they use as headquarters for lobster catching.

Peachey stated positively that the drowned men were accidental Foss and Peachey were released.

FILIPINO LAWMAKERS TAKE UP BIG WORK

MANILA, March 28.—A special session of the Philippine Legislature was convened at Baguio to-day, chiefly for the purpose of enacting public works legislation. In his message Governor Forbes recommended appropriations for the construction of roads and bridges and harbor and river improvements, to fight the rinderpest, and to provide for the deficiencies in the funds set apart for public schools and the support of the constabulary. The revenues show recent increases.

DR. GLOVER'S BROTHER TOBY NOW SOUGHT

An active search for Toby Le Blanc, brother of Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, is being made in the lawyers for the several brothers of the slain laundryman, who are contesting the will of the latter in the probate court. It was learned to-day at 9:30 o'clock Toby Le Blanc has not been seen about Boston since he was mentioned in the will filed in the probate court several weeks ago, where he was confined for contempt of court in refusing to answer questions of District Attorney Higgins at the inquest.

The lawyers for the contestants of the will are anxious to learn more about the details of how he happened to come into possession of the house in which Mrs. Glover now lives.

It was said to-day that Hattie Le Blanc will be called as a witness in the will hearing, despite the fact that Melvin M. Johnson, counsel for the will, has announced that he does not intend to call her in the probate court. It is believed that unless called to testify upon which Hattie is sealed, attorneys for the contestants intend to make an important fight in the court since Hattie is at least tell all she knows about the home life of Mrs. Glover. They expect she will throw a great deal of light on the family affairs.

Seymour Glover, 19 year brother whom Clarence remembered in his will, will resume the stand to-morrow.

WILLY HESS LEAVES SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Prof. Willy Hess has sent in his resignation as concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to take effect at the close of the current symphony season on April 30. Prof. Kneisel has just been appointed the head of the violin department of the Kneisel Quartet. Moreover, Mr. Hess will become the head of the Hess-Schroeder Quartet, successor of the Joachim Quartet and will now be known as Prof. Hess-Quartet. He also will become the first violin of the Schumann Quartet, which includes Mr. Hess, George Schumann, the well known composer and conductor. He also becomes confidant of the orchestra of the Hochschule Negotiations are in progress with Anton Witek, concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, and one of the most notable violinists in Germany, and it is probable that he will succeed Mr. Hess.

M. H. THACHER NEW CANAL ZONE RULER

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the nomination of Maurice H. Thacher of Kentucky to be a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission and Governor of the Canal Zone.

BRITISH KING STRICKEN WITH FATAL DISEASE

LONDON, March 28.—King Edward, it is learned to-day on the best of medical authority, has but a short time to live. He is suffering with arterio-sclerosis, a malady which never relents until its victim lies dead.

The King's death, it is stated, will be sudden, and when it will occur cannot be predicted, but the royal family has been told to stand prepared for the shock at any time.

Similar warning has been given to Lords Lansdowne and Rosebery, to the heads of the party in power in Parliament and to ex-Premier Balfour.

For weeks the King has been taking the treatment of chloral and nitrite of amyl, which is the only means of relief when he is threatened with choking to death from the spasms of the heart which follow the sudden obstructions of the passages by blood forced back by hardened arteries.

The treatment is efficacious only in the first stages of the disease. As time passes all methods of relief are found impotent. The King is now said to be in the final stages.

During his recent stay in Paris the King was obliged to leave the performance of Rostand's "Chanticler" in the third act. The significance of the choking fit which he suffered there was not understood by the audience.

The utmost secrecy as to the condition of Britain's sovereign is being observed. But it is said that he fully realizes his condition and is prepared for the end.

MRS. R. N. GARDNER ACCUSES HUSBAND

Mrs. Martha Sanford Gardner of Malden to-day filed in the Probate Court at East Cambridge suit against her husband, Robert N. Gardner, for separate support. Judge Chamberlain allowed an attachment of $10,000 against Gardner's estate. Mrs. Gardner charges that since January 29, 1905, her husband has treated her cruelly, threatened her and assaulted her. She names Marie Davis of Malden and declares that her husband has maintained the Davis woman in an apartment on Mountain avenue, Malden. The Gardners have three children.

O'MEARA'S MEN DENOUNCED BY ANGRY JUDGE

Judge Logan severely upbraided three policemen who were testifying against James Nee of No. 170 Bolton street, South Boston, charged with drunkenness in the South Boston district court, to-day.

Evidently the Judge believed that the officers were trying to railroad Nee, as he declined to allow Patrolmen Gregg, Skelton and Lisbon to finish their testimony. George N. Parker, probation officer, was told to look up Nee's record and Nee was allowed to go on his own recognizance.

Gregg testified: "I have seen the defendant drunk on the street every night for six months."

"Did you say that you had seen him every night, and that he was drunk every time you saw him?" queried Judge Logan, gruffly.

"Did you ever arrest the defendant?" asked the Judge.

"I have never arrested him," replied the officer.

"If that is so, do you think you have been doing your duty?" retorted Judge Logan in anger. "I will hear no more from you."

In his own behalf, Nee testified that he had been working at Pier 1 and at the sugar refinery. He asked Judge Logan to investigate his story.

MYSTERY IN SHOOTING

CHICAGO, March 28.—The police booked another mysterious Italian shooting to-day. John Jocko was shot in the neck and arm while talking with two friends in front of a theatre at State and Eighteenth streets. Filippo Catalano was pointed out to the officers by a witness of the shooting. At the hospital, however, Jocko declined to identify him.

BOYS TO SING BOSTON PRAISE AT BIG DINNER

Pressure upon members of the Chamber of Commerce from boys who want to go to the dinner in honor of the younger generation at the Hotel Somerset to-morrow night is getting heavy. Three of the lads in the general office of the chamber are working with more zest than usual to-day since Secretary McKibben notified them that he desired their company on that occasion as His guests.

Chairman James J. Storrow of the committee on arrangements will also be host to a party of boys, and a number of other members have gone outside the ranks of their own families in order that some worthy boy, who has stood well in their studies or have gained the approval of their employers, but who happen to have a father who is a member of the Chamber, may get this opportunity to sit down side by side with the big business men of Boston.

The program of the entertainment will be one of the attractive features of the occasion. It is an eight-page folder illustrated with specially designed sketches of prominent buildings of the City Hall order, and containing, besides the list of speakers, the words and music of which have been written for the occasion to familiar airs. The chorus of one of these set to the strains of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and entitled "To Boston," runs as follows:

Glory, glory to old Boston,
Glory, glory to old Boston,
Glory, glory to old Boston,
The home of the brave and free.

You breathless, stifling atmosphere of words that came across a night's sleep.
Now comes the refrain for the lilts to make a republican.
And some of those lucky ones carried for the laws of liberty.
Shouting to shoulder one.

Here is the chorus of another song set to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne":

Then let everybody here get busy,
If I double X it,
Let everybody get busy,
And make the whoop-er up and down.
For it's Boston's business to rule the roost,
Let all others be the dub to bend,
Then let everybody here get busy,
Here for the uplift of Boston.

The whole purpose of the dinner is to give the boys a good time and to start in forest them in the big and important things of life as they will come to know them when they start out later to make their own way in the world.

TARIFF FEATURES IN EFFECT THURSDAY

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The maximum and minimum features of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law are scheduled to become effective next Thursday, March 31, at midnight. From present indications, however, the maximum rates, which are 25 per cent higher than the minimum rates, will not be applied to any country. More than 100 proclamations have been signed by President Taft granting the minimum rates to various countries including all the important countries, and about a dozen or twelve additional proclamations which will be issued this week will clear up the work.

OFFERS COLLECTION TO CITY'S MUSEUM

One of the best collections of New England birds and birds' eggs and curios from all over the world have been offered by John T. Jones of No. 112 Tremont street, West Everett, to the city to place in the proposed Natural History Museum, that was made possible by the $250,000 bequest from Henry Parkman. Mayor Fitzgerald will accept the offer if Mr. Jones keeps the exhibits until the city has a place suitable for shipping.

MIDNIGHT LUNCHES TROUBLE MAKERS

With an overpowering weakness for egg sandwiches Leonidas Manassas, a fireman on the steamship Nebraska of the Merchants and Miners' Line is charged with having cultivated the habit of taking eggs from the galley for midnight lunches. He was arrested to-day and held in $100 bonds. Captain Dilley reported $2,000 worth of stock eggs. As the alleged offense occurred on the high seas the trial will be before Commissioner Hayes.

MELLEN CORNERS ALL TYER'S GOATS

STOCKBRIDGE, March 28.—Charles S. Mellen has bought of Peter J. Tyer, known as "the sage of Frogs Landing," a flock Angora goats which Mr. Mellen will use as herders for his flock of 600 thoroughbred Southdown sheep on his estate, Council Grove. Two goats will bring for a hundred sheep and are guaranteed to keep off all sheep-killing dogs. There has been a big demand for Angoras since Mr. Mellen bought the first and the price has gone up 100 per cent.

Rules for Air Travel Issued by Aero Club.

PARIS—Rules for air navigation have been drawn up by the Aero Club of France and been submitted to the French government as the basis of a law. Following are some of the club's suggestions:

Aerial craft, whether aeroplane or dirigible balloon, must not circulate lower than 150 feet above private property.

Flying above cities requires a permit from the municipalities.

Flying in fog is not allowed.

Transportation of explosives except for hunting ammunition is prohibited.

The firing of rockets is recommended as a way of avoiding collisions.

Venus Visible at Noon.

MANILA—As a result of perfect atmospheric conditions the planet Venus was visible at noon to-day, shining with much brilliancy that it seemed scarcely less luminous than the sun. The natives are mildly agitated, apparently seeing in the phenomenon what they believe to be a celestial answer to their unusual devotions of Holy Week.

$375,000,000 for Russian Navy.

ST. PETERSBURG—The newspapers announce that the government is about to introduce in the Duma a naval building programme providing for an expenditure of $375,000,000 during the next decade. The first instalment of the programme will call for $37,500,000.

Paris Monument to Wells.

PARIS—A monument to Horace Wells has been unveiled in the Place des Etats Unis. Horace Wells was born in Hartford, Ct., in 1815, and was a pioneer in the use of nitrous oxide gas in dental operations, to prevent pain. He committed suicide in New York in 1848.

Daughter to Princess Margaret.

GEORGE DEXTER OF BROOKLINE DEAD

George Dexter is dead after a long illness at his Brookline home. The handsome estate of Alvah was the property of the deceased's father, who purchased it over forty years ago. Mr. Dexter, who was 67 years old, was a member of Goodall, Mitchell, Dexter & Co., the wool firm, for many years. About thirty years the firm has been known as Mitchell, Dexter & Co. He leaves a widow and one son, Alvin S. Dexter, also of Brookline.

ASSESSORS HIT BACK AT FINANCE BOARD

In a report to Mayor Fitzgerald, filed today, the principal assessors strike back at the Finance Commission, which recommended heavy reductions in expense in their department, terming the recommendations, "penny wise and pound foolish." Summed up, the opinion of the assessors is that the reductions would cause greater losses than saving. They insist that the clerical force is not too large and that they should be permitted to continue the work of assessing the poll tax.

NEED A COOKBOOK?

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell came home to enjoy Easter, and one of his pleasures was reading in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN yesterday an account of Uncle Sam's new economy cookbook. Congressman O'Connell announces to-day that he will be glad to send a copy of the book to any of his constituents who wishes one, by a postal card to Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, Washington, and he will send you one.

SHARE OF LEE ESTATE TO MRS. LONGWORTH

The will of George C. Lee, one of the founders of the banking house of Lee, Higginson & Co., was filed to-day with the clerk of the Middlesex County Probate Court. The amount of the estate is not given, but it is known that it will amount to several millions of dollars.

By the terms of the will filed to-day the real estate, consisting of homes in Newton and Brookline, is left to the widow, Caroline H. Lee. The personal property, which comprises the bulk of the estate, is left in trust. One-half of the income from this fund goes to the widow. The remaining half of the income from the trust is to be divided into six equal portions to Rose Lee Longworth, Joseph Lee Smound, Caroline E. Fessenden, Isabella Lee Mumford, daughters; George C. Lee, Jr., son, and Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, granddaughter.

This annual income will amount to more than $100,000 a year to each of the persons named and to the widow. Mrs. Longworth is a daughter of former President Roosevelt by his first wife, who was a daughter of Mr. Lee. The controversy began when Mr. Roosevelt was a student at Harvard.

The trustees of the Lee trust are George C. Lee, Jr., and Charles Sumner Bird. The past many years represented his father's interest and that of Mrs. Alice Lee Higginson, Mrs. Lowell H. Fessenden and George S. Mumford, sons-in-law.

The will is dated September 26, 1901.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE ON INCREASE

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The exports of this country to South America are increasing slowly. The last report of the Department of Commerce and Labor shows that exports from the United States during the past month expanded about $2,000,000 over that of February of the year 1909. The bulk of the increased trade was with Argentine, the figures for that country alone amounting to an increase of more than $2,000,000 per month.

WOMAN SLAIN, POLICE JAIL HER HUSBAND

BALTIMORE, Md., March 28.—The body of a woman, supposed to be Mrs. A. L. Merrick of this city, was found to-day on the estate of Alexander Brown, a prominent Baltimore banker, near here. The husband of the woman fled from the city after the body was found. He also has been identified as the owner of a bloody handkerchief was found in his pocket.

LABOR
That its 1,150 members may be fully prepared to strike April 1, if necessary to enforce the new wage scale, Painters' Union No. 11 to-day let out with a call for a special meeting at Wells Memorial building to-morrow night.

Following a four-week strike against a 25 per cent cut in wages, in the silverware department, the 118 girl weavers at the Rogers Cartier Mills in Taunton are reported to be unanimously opposed to returning to work unless their old wage rate is restored. The girls' strike was decided at the Women's Union street headquarters of the Women's Trade Union League, the thousand employees in all are idle as a result of the strike.

NEVER ACCEPT A SUBSTITUTE

JUDGE HARRIS ATTACKS LAW FAVORING RICH

Judge Robert O. Harris of the Superior Court, before the Congregational ministers in Pilgrim Hall, talked to-day of the progress of the probation system.

"There is something defective in our methods of dispensing justice," said the judge, "when the man with money in his pocket, after being too convivial, can go out of court, after paying his fine, and the poor workingman, who has had some employment during a holiday and lost his head, is summoned into court and fined, and because he cannot pay, is forced to go to prison. It is an abuse in our law, which should be wiped out.

"You make 14,000 persons criminals every year by this system, because they are poor. If anything can be found to relieve this situation, it is the probation system. Our business men in Boston should be interested in probation so that we can make more than mere cattle in the pen.

"When youngsters come before me in court, say between the ages of fourteen to twenty-two years of age, I feel like preaching to me in order to save a few of them.

"The probation officer often goes to the jails and has a talk with the lads, getting their stories and studying their temperaments before they have been tried.

"I want to keep the first men out of jail. After a man comes out of jail, and comes to you, asking to be helped to find a position, do not say to him, as many do say, 'I wish you well, but I can't give you a job.' The individual should take a chance in saving a boy.

"Under the 1909 law the State Prison, under the law, we can give only 1,000 employment during their confinement because organized labor objects. A man in prison should be made to work to support his family.

"It costs $4.52 a head every year to keep a man in prison. We can make them pay for their own support."

WIFE COLLAPSES IN SEARCH FOR HUSBAND

Mrs. George S. Dinsmore, wife of the master mariner who has been mysteriously missed from home for a fortnight, has collapsed under the strain of prolonged worry and is now ill in bed at the Dinsmore home, No. 108 Draper street, Dorchester. Mr. Dinsmore left home as usual on March 15. He usually carried $500 to $600 on his person. He had also drawn $1561 the afternoon before from the South End National Bank to pay his longshoremen. He has not been seen since he left home. But $1000 now bears his name in a way-bill and rubbed and possibly murdered.

8 KILLED IN AN EXPLOSION ON A CRUISER

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Eight seamen were killed in an accident on the United States cruiser Charleston on March 27, near Olongapo, P. I. Details of the accident were received here to-day in a cabled report to the navy department from the commander-in-chief of the Asiatic Station. A dispatch said that the accident was due to the blowing out of a breech plug of a three-inch gun, probably because of a premature explosion of the powder. The killed are:

Philip McKee, master at arms; Walter Amstert, seaman; Henry Almond, seaman; Leo Redmeale, ordinary seaman; Harry Reaves Grubbs, ordinary seaman; Ralph Berkman, ordinary seaman; Max Carnard, ordinary seaman; Edward Albert Molin, private in marine corps.

The commander-in-chief announced that the burial will be at Cavacon, Cavite. A court of inquiry has been appointed to investigate the accident. The department believes the fatalities to be of a freak character and that when the breech of the three-inch gun which was on the rail blew out it flew across the deck, killing the men.

The statement made in the cablegram that the accident occurred in the evening is believed by the Navy Department authorities to show that target practice was going on, as the light in the forepart of the ship is favorable to such work.

The Charleston is soon to give way to the New York as flagship of the fleet. The New York is being made over under orders to leave the Philadelphia navy yard on April 9 to go to New York. The Charleston, whose commanding officer is Commander John H. Gibbons, has been ordered to proceed when ready to Puget Sound for overhauling.

She is a cruiser of 9,700 tons, 324 feet long, with a sixty-six-foot beam, a draught of nearly 24 feet six inches, and a speed of 22.04 knots. Her complement is 564 officers and men.

She has an armament of fourteen six-inch guns, eighteen 6-pounders, nine-teen 1-pounders, two automatic rifles, one 3-pounder, automatic; four one-pounder, automatic; eight one-pounder, rapid-firing; ten machine guns, two three-inch rapid-firing rifles and four torpedo tubes. The Charleston holds several target practice records.

The breech-block of the exploding gun was blown off with the force of a bullet. In its path it struck an all before it, smashing a steel stanchion in twain. Seven of the men died instantly. The eighth lived but a short time.

MORSE, FROM HIS CELL, ISSUES A STATEMENT DENOUNCING ENEMIES

Sentenced to serve fifteen years in the Federal prison at Atlanta for breaking the banking laws of the country, Charles W. Morse, of New York, who is well known in Boston and throughout New England, has written an article in his cell, which he entitled, "Why I Am in Prison."

The former financier, who places his losses at $7,0000,000, declares he was the victim of a mob—"a pack of wolves after him and trying to tear him." "The noblest wife that ever lived," he says, has helped to cheer him while enduring his "brutal sentence." His article in part follows:

By CHARLES W. MORSE.

Corporations may not have soulsbut their individual human members have, and they have hearts as well, and their hearts may be made to suffer as keenly as the hearts of poorer men.

Perhaps the press fed the imaginations of my enemies by the picturesque references to me as "a Napoleon of finance," "the dashing financier" and even the "audacious financier." * * * As a cold business truth, had I been dashing or audacious I could not have inspired the confidence of the old heads in the banking business.

When as a boy I sold candy on an excursion steamer I had dreamed of owning steamers, and it was but natural that I should turn my attention in that direction.

Because I was quiet and did not take everybody into my confidence, I was regarded curiously as "a man of mystery," "a man of surprises."

If I had all these transactions to do over again or any of the others, I do not believe that I would act differently.

I was never a welcome factor in New York finance. I was regarded as an uncertain and disquieting element, and I suppose I did disturb the dreams of some of the heavier capitalists.

Individuals and cliques whom it would be invidious to designate, but whose names must naturally occur to anybody familiar with finance in this country made attempt after attempt to crush or cripple me.

All my life I have observed that the passions of a mob are easily swayed, but I had never dreamed of becoming the victim of one.

I was the logical victim because I was the one who had been "stirring up the animals," and the animals were all growling at me and awaiting their opportunity to get at me.

At times it seemed that the whole financial world was in full cry after me like a pack of wolves trying to tear me down.

The public was prejudiced against me, and this in turn prejudiced the courts. In the disagreement of the experts and the muddling of the jury I was not given the benefit of the doubt, but the burden of it was placed upon me.

If a perfectly normal and sober jury could not have passed intelligently upon my case, how in the world could one that drank as they did?

Hustling is right in my line.

It takes more brains and more energy to make a second fortune than a first. I compare my losses at over $7,000,000, and I consider that I have paid a fine of that amount besides entering upon this manifestly outrageous imprisonment.

I think I have established the fact that I am an optimist. Mine is the gospel of hard work and good cheer.

I have been greatly heartened and I aspired by the noblest wife that ever lived.

I can frankly say that the the bottom of my heart I have never really despaired. * * * I have smiled at those who have been solicitous about my making away with myself or trying to escape from prison. The idea of self-destruction has never crossed my mind.

While by this brutal sentence I may be brought to ruin, the damage done to me as an individual is not half as important as the injury to the administration of justice in this country.

Mrs. Charles W. Morse, "Most Devoted Wife."

FIND ELOPING HEIRESS AFTER LONG SEARCH

John M. Shaw, a former Boston quick lunch waiter, who, posing as Lieutenant Coxe, U. S. N., ran away with the beautiful daughter of Louis Belmont, a wealthy Hartford, Ct., business man, is to-day on his way back from Montreal to Boston to face the charges of abduction and forgery.

The man was found after one of the most remarkable searches in the annals of American criminal history. For three years the girl's father has done nothing else. He gave up his business, employed six different detective agencies, and personally led the hunt for his daughter.

Practically every dollar of his fortune was gone after searching in every large city on the American continent. He finally found the pair in Montreal, where the bogus lieutenant was working as a waiter in charge of the lunch room at McGill University.

Shaw at having been influenced by the bogus lieutenant and fear that the disgrace would kill her parents has kept the beautiful Anna Louis Belmont, hardly nineteen now, from going back to her home.

When her father came, however, she was only too glad to start for home. Shaw also was willing to go. The long hunt for him had broken his courage. He says he is willing to take his medicine.

The pair were living as Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw in a cheap apartment. The girl was working with him, and between them they eked out a scanty living.

Lieutenant Coxe, or Lieutenant Cartwright, or Lieutenant Grimshaw—there are half a dozen other aliases under which this little waiter was known—created a sensation along the North Shore on three successive years, and was entertained by the most exclusive society sets before he was discovered.

Despite the fact that he never had any schooling and never went to sea, he passed among the best known naval officers and deceived even them so long before the fact. Only his habit of passing worthless checks caused him to be discovered.

In this city Shaw cut out a pace that made him the most popular person in the smart set for a while. Here he appeared as Lieutenant Capehart, battleship Kentucky.

He invited some of the young officers of the Naval Reserve to dinners, and some of the prettiest girls received his attentions. He gave a little party at the Essex, and ran up a champagne bill of $200. He had so much fun, and when finally sentenced to the House of Correction.

SOFT COAL MINES MAY BE SHUT DOWN

CHICAGO, March 28. Shutdown of the Illinois coal mines will take place on April 1 unless some agreement is reached between the 75,000 miners and the operators. The miners ask for an increase in wages, but the operators insist that no increase can be given because of economic reasons. A meeting of a joint wage scale will be held in Chicago in an effort to reach a system.

SEARCH FOR HUNTER.

BENTON'S HARBOR, Mich., March 28. A party of seven hunters is searching the upper peninsula to-day in an effort to find the remains of Robert Bellby, a deer hunter, who left his camp on November 16 and never returned. The missing man's son, who heads the expedition, declares he will not return until his father's fate has been settled.

MAUD O'MEARA MISSING SINCE LAST THURSDAY

FEAR WOMAN IS HELD CAPTIVE

The whole police department has been notified to be on the lookout for Maud O'Meara, a handsome young woman of No. 6 Union park, who has been missing from her home for four days. She started out to buy an Easter suit on Thursday afternoon and has not been seen since. Her friends believe that she has either been a victim of foul play or is held somewhere against her will.

George W. Tatro, a retired merchant, by whom she was employed as housekeeper, notified the police of her disappearance. Last Fall the woman, who is thirty three years old and quite attractive, was divorced from her husband, Nelson J. Dupuis. He has been questioned about the woman, but seems to know as little about her movements as the others.

The missing woman had with her about $15 when she left home.

CANOE CAPSIZED BY "CHANTECLER" HAT

Miss Hilda Larkin of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, will leave her new Chantecler hat at home after this when she goes canoeing. Miss Larkin was canoeing on the Charles River yesterday with a young man friend when a stiff breeze caught the wide brim of the hat with such force that the canoe was capsized. Miss Larkin came within but she was brought ashore by her escort, assisted by John Hardy of Waltham. "Too many hat pins," said Miss Larkin, "but how else can you manage a Chantecler hat? It won't stay on your head unless you fasten it. Wish would have thought it would upset the canoe?"

CELL DOORS ARE OPENING FOR GRAFTERS

PITTSBURG, March 28.—The shadow of the penitentiary loomed before some of Pittsburg's rich men to-day when Prosecutor Blakely began his search for the "men higher up" in the councilmanic bribery investigation. He summoned before the Grand Jury all the directors of the six banks accused of having bribed city lawmakers in order to become depositories of the municipality. The combined wealth, personal and business, of the men called is estimated at $100,000,000.

The investigation which was already led several men to jail, is rapidly nearing its climax. The grand jury rooms were crowded to-day, many of the most well known men in Pittsburg. Nearly all appeared nervous and some were on the verge of collapse.

Charles Yeverks and Harry Mochlbronner are two of the most interesting witnesses in this gigantic expose which began in the case against Lincoln Kirby, known as the "wharf rat councilman." Both of these men have been in the penitentiary and said: "It came easy in the beginning, but increased at having been go between and distributor of money and secretary of the weekly rampages of the councilmen on which their operations were planned. His confession tore the lid off the whole situation.

Yeverks and Mochlbronner were respectively bookkeeper and teller of the Workingmen's Savings & Trust Company, convicted of $700,000 peculations. When first accused, they threatened if sent to the penitentiary to take some of the "big fellows" with them. Now that they have been sentenced, they hold a conference with the prosecutor and their sentence was delayed. They were in the grand jury room to-day.

SENATOR'S 'O.K.' WAS AS COOK

NEW YORK, March 28.—Mrs. H. A. Thompson, former proprietor of the Tuxpan Zoo Inn, and now in the Tombs, charged with passing forged checks after her bank balance became exhausted, was enabled to obtain the lease of the Tuxpan Zoo through a letter of recommendation from United States Senator Scott of West Virginia. But Senator Scott sends word that his indorsement only covered Mrs. Thompson's ability to serve a good dinner and conduct a hotel in a proper manner. He says:

"In partnership with a man named Brown she conducted the McClure House at Wheeling for over three years, boarded there for that period. But I did not guarantee or indorse her credit. I expect that ex-Senator Davis's reference was of the same sort as mine."

Henri Mouquin, the restaurant man, holds a note for $1,000 indorsed to him and given by Mrs. Thompson as security for a bill of $600 for wines. Mouquin says the note is signed with the name of a Pittsburg restaurant man named Wilson and a director of the Colonial Trust company, at which institution the note is made payable.

ARTISTIC STREET LAMPS FOR CITY

Boston's streets are to be adorned with new artistic street gas lampposts under the proposed new $2,000,000 street lighting contract if Superintendent of Streets Emerson has his way. Superintendent Emerson plans to have a five-foot addition coupled on to the tops of the present poles and to have an arm extended 15 right angles from the tops of the poles, from which will hang the lamps.

$5.00 REWARD OFFERED FOR TEN-CENT DOLL

NEW YORK, March 28.—"If you've found my dolly please be very good to her and bring her back right off." This is the plea of little Miss Mary Flagler, who lives at No. 32 Park avenue, the only daughter of Harry Harkness Flagler and the granddaughter of H. M. Flagler, the Standard Oil magnate. She wants it back so badly that her papa will very gladly pay $10—about 100 times the worth of the old toy—to whomever finds Dolly and returns her. The doll was forgotten on the front steps of the Flagler home when the children had been playing "Indian."

SUSPECTED SLAYER OF STENOGRAPHER DENIES HE EVER SAW GIRL

having ever seen the girl. She also declares that the gunny sack in which the victim's body was wrapped, had laid for weeks serving as a mat, before the kitchen door of Wolter's flat.

Wolter Makes Admission.

In Wolter's trunk the police found wire which they say is identical with that with which the gunny sack was bound. The nightshirt in which some of the girl victim's hair and hairpins were wrapped bears the initial "W." Wolter admits this shirt is his.

Ruth Wheeler, the police declared, was smothered, and, while still living, but unconscious, was put into the fireplace in Wolter's flat at No. 224 East Seventy-fifth street and burned to death. This assertion was made after Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon had performed an autopsy and found the little stenographer's lungs congested with soot.

On a part of the girl's neck beneath the cord that encircled it was discovered what the police say are finger prints. This may have a most important bearing on the case.

A microscopic examination is being made and an impression of Wolter's fingers will be taken and a comparison made. The police believe that Ruth Wheeler was strangled and possibly chloroformed before the body was burned.

In this connection the statement of DR. O'Hanlon is significant. He said:

"Over the right nostril and on part of the face I found the remnant of a square of linen. I believe the girl was smothered and the still after her unconscious was put into the fire place and the body incinerated.

Fate of Ruth Wheeler.

Ruth Wheeler, girlish, innocent and ambitious, left the Merchants' and Bankers' Business School at No. 605 Madison avenue, soon after 9 o'clock last Thursday night to seek a position as stenographer from "A Wolter, secretary," who had answered an advertisement in a daily paper inserted by the college in an effort to keep its guarantee to furnish its graduates positions.

She called at No. 222 East Seventy-fifth street, was directed by Mrs. John Mohl, the wife of the caretaker, to a cheap furnished apartment occupied by Wolter and the Mueller girl, on the third and top story, and mysteriously disappeared.

Her charred and blackened body, with the strands of a tell tale rope about her neck was discovered in the yard of the Seventy-fifth street house Saturday, where it had been thrown from the fire escape leading from the rooms occupied by Wolter. He was then under arrest for abduction, as the result of a search instituted by the family of the missing girl and the police.

With the finding of the body of the missing girl, Katchen Mueller, who had been active in the defence of Wolter, disappeared. A police cordon was established, and she was taken into custody while approaching the house at No. 222 East One-Hundred-and-Fifth street, where Wolter had engaged a room and had guided her after a sudden determination to quit the Seventy-fifth street house.

Wolter Gets Third Degree.

To the police, under a right third degree," Wolter declared he never had seen Ruth Wheeler, although admitting he had written in the post card in answer to the advertisement.

The name and address on this postcard were turned over to the little girl grade ate by the business college as a person and place to which she should apply for employment.

Wolter attempted to establish an alibi, saying he had not been in the Seventy-fifth street rooms on Thursday, from early in the morning until 5 o'clock or later in the afternoon.

To solve the mystery Katchen Mueller had to be found. The girl in whom the mysterious youth, who was "mad about women," had shown enough sentimental interest to preserve the faded yellow dress of "Polly" in which he had first seen her, was found, and told a straightforward, if untold, story.

SISTER TELLS OF SEARCH FOR GIRL

NEW YORK, March 28.—Adelaide Wheeler, the beautiful and athletic sister of the murdered girl, her large eyes welling with tears, told an AMERICAN reporter the story of her visit to the Wolter apartment in search of her young sister Ruth.

As she related how, unaccompanied, she bravely climbed the dark and rickety staircase of the East Seventy-fifth street house and forced her way into the dingy apartment occupied by Wolter, her mother broke down and had to be almost carried from the room by another sister.

"I knew Ruth was in there," she said. "I felt it and was so sure that I did not feel the least bit timid when I climbed to the top of the house. It must have been 8 o'clock, the place was pitch dark and I had never been on the East side much. It distressed me to have to go over this, but as Miller woman was arrested, I will tell you how she impressed me.

Woman Opens Door.

"She was the woman who opened the door in answer to my knock, and as soon as I saw her face I shuddered for darling Ruth, and I knew at once the class of people with whom I had to deal. I felt that to announce my errand at first would end in the door being shut in my face, so I had to tell an untruth. In reply to her question I told her I was from the business school, and, as I had heard that Wolter was a bookkeeper, I would like to examine his ledgers to see a specimen of his work. The door was opened and I walked in.

"Wolter was in bed and the woman but half dressed.

"Where is Ruth Wheeler?" I asked Wolter. He looked at the woman, smiled and said he did not know which I meant, 'Ruth' Ruth' Ruth'. I screamed a dozen times, hoping that she would hear my call and answer it, but the only reply I obtained was the harsh and sarcastic laugh of the Miller woman. That laugh I'll never forget. It mocked me.

"I could feel Ruth was there, and I fell down on my knees and commenced to search. I crawled under the table and under the bed, I looked behind the bureau, in the closet, everywhere, but no Ruth. What could I do? I still felt that she was there, but there was no other place to look.

Escapes From Room.

"As I got up from the floor I saw Wolter exchanging glances with the woman. She sneered, and whenever I asked for my sister she laughed at me. I thought I had better go, and turned to the door. It was locked. Let me out and force at once," I said to the woman. If you don't open the door from this side a policeman who is waiting on the outside will burst it in. She immediately unbolted the door and I left.

"During the time I was in the room the staircase lights had been turned on, and I went downstairs and spoke to Mrs. Mohl, the caretaker. She told me that a young girl had been there in the morning asking to see Wolter, and the description she gave of the girl corresponded with the clothes that Ruth wore. There is nothing more to say now."

REALTY DEALS SHOW INCREASE FOR THE WEEK

Real estate transactions in Suffolk county the past week showed marked improvement over the previous week and also the corresponding weeks of last year and 1908. The total number of transactions, as well as mortgages, exceeded those of the same week of last year and also 1908, but the aggregate amount of mortgages was slightly below the mark established for the same week a year ago. It was ahead of 1907 for 1908, however.

The following table, compiled by the Boston Real Estate Exchange, gives the exhibits of record for the week ending March 26 at the Suffolk registry of deeds:

	1910	1909	1908
No. of mortgages	219	208	174
No. of mortgages	219	208	174
Total of mortgages	$774,657	$803,600	$721,104

The appended table, also compiled by the Real Estate Exchange, gives in detail each day's transactions for the week beginning March 21 and ending March 26:

	Sales.	Mtg.	Amt. Mtgs.
March 21	56	52	$72,852
March 22	67	59	107,739
March 23	50	42	95,670
March 24	110	107	347,456
March 25	75	59	150,182
March 26	50	41	71,758
Total	408	219	$774,657

Church Buys Property.

Among the sales reported today was that of the estate at No. 50 Woodbine street, near Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, which has been purchased by the Swedish Congregational Church from August Eriksson. It comprises a 2½ story frame house and 3,820 square feet of land, all assessed for $5,000.

Eleanor L. Hall has sold to Mary A. Monahan the frame dwelling and 1,650 square feet of land, all taxed for $5,400, of No. 24 Colonial avenue, corner of Millett street, Dorchester. The land is rated at $3,200.

Henderson & Ross report mail papers passed in the sale for Raymond P. Delano of lot 48 on Mt. Everett street, Dorchester, near Hamilton street, containing 6,283 square feet of land. William H. Crosby is the purchaser, and will proceed at once with the erection of two high-grade three-family apartments. The land has a total frontage of twenty-five cents a foot.

Another Dorchester property sold is a lot of land on Highland street, near East street, containing 5,050 square feet and assessed for $700, which has been purchased by Edmund W. Chapman. William Duff is the grantor.

Other Realty Deals.

In Brighton the David Strachan estate has sold to John Oikeunie the frame house and 4,318 square feet of land at No. 521 Cambridge street, near Union square. This property is assessed for a total of $5,500, of which $2,000 is on the land.

Sarah J. Taylor has sold to John A. Lowell one set of frame buildings and 2,500 square feet of land on Mead street, between Bromfield and Devonshire, Charlestown. This property is assessed on a total valuation of $3,700, of which $2,300 is on the land.

ETNA READY TO EXPLODE AGAIN

CATANIA, Sicily, March 28.—Whirlwinds, caused directly by the eruption of Mt. Etna, today added to the terror of the panic-stricken inhabitants and the misery of the refugees. The heat from the lava and the craters, rising, produces atmospheric disturbances and whirlwinds which race about the devastated country and threaten the districts unharmed by the eruption.

Nicolosi was preparing for a nightlier outburst than any of recent years, the lava burst than any of recent years, and lava choking the craters and stopping the flow that would be the safety valve. There is now danger of a gigantic explosion which might rear the mountain asunder.

Frank Perret, the Brooklyn volcanologist and Professor Ricco, who had charge of the Etna observatory, today remained near the craters, though many begged them to leave. They persisted in risking their lives for science.

HIBBARD IS SILENT ON MAYOR'S OFFER

Ex-Mayor Hibbard silently stole away early today from the steamer Ontario, which he had come from Newport News, Va., to escape questioning as to his intention toward the offer of the city collectorship from Mayor Fitzgerald.

Newswriters who were anxious to learn Mr. Hibbard's views made every possible effort to see him when the steamer docked, but no one succeeded.

He had instructed the officers that he was not to be disturbed, and they followed his injunction faithfully.

Mr. Hibbard wishes, it is understood, to confer with political friends before expressing any opinion on the collectorship matter.

J. R. EDMANDS DEAD.

An apoplectic stroke caused the death of John Rayner Edmands, S. B., a charter member of the Appalachian Club and a noted scientist, yesterday, he was stricken at years with Harvard University, died suddenly in Baltimore. He was returning from Florida, where he had gone for the benefit of his health.

Personal Items.

FRANCIS P. GARVIN, former assistant to District Attorney Pelletier, is engaged to Mabel, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony N. Brady. Mr. Brady has been a leading "high dance" figure for years.

RABBI LEONARD J. LEVY, a friend of Colonel Roosevelt, has been elected to the pulpit of a Pittsburg synagogue for life at $15,000 a year. If he dies at seventy-five he is to receive $5,000 pension.

MRS. CHARLOTTE F. MCKEE, sister of William Rice Marsh, millionaire, whose murder Albert T. Patrick is in Sing Sing, is dead at Springfield, Mass., aged eighty-three.

REV. DR. CHARLES L. SLATTERY of Christ Church, Springfield, Mass., has been elected rector of Grace Church, N. Y., as the successor to the late Dr. W. R. Huntington.

COLONEL DUDLEY EVANS, president of the Wells Fargo Express Company, died in a New York Hospital, a victim of gall stones.

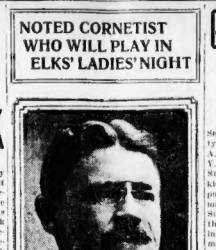
JOHN R. WINDER, eighty-eight, first councilor of the presidency of the Mormon Church, is dead at Salt Lake City.

BETTY GREEN, it is reported, has sold the Texas-Midland Road to the Yoakum-Hawley interests.

DR. COOK, explorer, will be in the United States in a few days, if he is not now here in hiding.

CHARLES SPRAGUE SMITH, director of the People's Institute, New York, is seriously ill.

NOTED CORNETIST WHO WILL PLAY IN ELKS' LADIES' NIGHT



HERBERT L. CLARKE.

ELKS PLANNING LADIES' NIGHT

Next Thursday evening at 7.30 o'clock Boston Lodge of Elks holds its first ladies' night in its new home on Somerset street. The Governor, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and their wives have been invited and are expected to be present as guests of honor.

Among the stellar attractions for the occasion, Herbert L. Clarke, the greatest cornetist of the times and a member of Sousa's band, has promised to play one or more solos. Clarke is an Elk, otherwise his services could hardly be secured, for he is now busy preparing to join the band and make a tour of the country.

The committee, of which J. W. O'Meley is chairman, is competing arrangements for what is expected to be by far the best and most entertaining ladies' night ever held by Boston lodge. A fine series of artists has been secured to help make the occasion one not to be forgotten. Gilfi's band is to furnish dance music and a concert. A buffet luncheon to be be served.

MT. VESUVIUS CAUSES ALARM

NAPLES, March 28.—Religious services were held today here to implore divine intervention against the threatened eruption of Mt. Vesuvius. Crowds of tourists went up the mountain to view the five new fissures which have formed about the main crater. Steam was issuing from them, and there were other alarming indications.

Professor Matteucci, in charge of the observatory on Vesuvius, from which the Austrian Prince Lobkowitz, came to Naples to confer with the Italian savants, is making a systematic investigation of the conditions on Vesuvius. The scientific expedition, which left Naples today, is equipped and made a thorough inspection, as far as possible, of the new fissures.

A SUNDAY AMERICAN want ad it is often the road to fortune.

POLICE AVERT PANIC IN WEST END FIRE

The presence of mind of Patrolman John Campbell of the Joy street police station was all that prevented a panic among the people living in the three-story wooden dwelling at No. 153 Cambridge street, West End, when fire was discovered early today in the liquor store of Hosiin & Co. on the first floor of the building.

The two families in the house started to flee down over the smoke filled stairs to the street, when they were met by Patrolman Campbell, who told them they were in no danger and to return to their quarters.

GRAFT HUNT NOW EXCITING

NEW YORK, March 28.—George F. Seward, president of the Equitable Casualty & Casualty Company, gave the lie direct to Edward A. Brown, a hotel man of Middletown, N. Y., at the fire insurance investigation by State Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss to-day, when he identified the former purchasing agent at Sing Sing prison as the man who told him that for $10,000 "Tim" Sullivan would kill a bill then pending in the Legislature. Brown admitted knowing Sullivan slightly, but said he had never make any proposition regarding insurance legislation to Seward, "or any other living man."

Mr. Seward was recalled and declared:

"I am morally certain that he is the man. I wish to qualify that however, by saying that I have not seen him before in daylight or in eighteen years. It was eight when I saw the Brown at Sing Sing, but from his general make-up I am sure that this is the man who told me about 'Tim' Sullivan."

"I'll bet 10 cents to $100 that Seward is a liar," Brown declared angrily. "I guess they're trying to make a fool out of me."

A letter from William H. Buckley, "accelerator of legislation," to the Prussia Fire Insurance Company, calling for $1,250 and an annual retainer, "for not under any circumstances would such a matter be taken up by any reputable lawyer."

LAKE-RAIL RATE ON FLOUR IS REDUCED

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day ordered the lake-and-rail rates on flour from Minneapolis, Minn., to New York city and the Atlantic seaboard reduced from 23 cents per 100 pounds to 21½ cents, beginning May 10.

PRICE OF COAL DOWN 50 CENTS

Coal will be 50 cents cheaper a ton in Boston after April 15.

This perennial joke played by the coal barons at the beginning of warm weather is again heard. Just as the furnace is closed for the Summer and the head of the family wonders how he is going to square up the Winter's coal bill, he hears that, if he could only burn ten tons of the black diamonds during the Summer he could save 50 cents per ton. Another 85 opportunity lost.

Under the new rate the price of coal in Boston will be: Pea, $5; furnace, $6.25; egg, $6.75; stove and nut, $7.

The most expensive will be stove and nut. Those are the kinds burned most in Summer by the average family.

Note—About this time watch out for a rise in the price of ice.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

ITALIAN CABINET PACKED BY LUZZATTI

ROME, March 28.—Luigi Luzzatti, Minister of Agriculture in the cabinet which resigned March 24, has practically decided upon the new Ministry, the formation of which was intrusted to him by King Victor Emmanuel. It will include the Marquis A. di San Giuliano, Foreign Minister, who held this office in 1906; four members of the Giolitti cabinet; three Radicals and Signor Pantano, who was Minister of Agriculture in the first Sonnio Ministry, four years ago.

U. S. QUITS IN SUBWAY FIGHT

The temporary injunction issued against the Boston Elevated Company and the High Nawn Contracting Company preventing them from carrying out their construction plan of the Cambridge subway near Brattle square, where the government contended that it injured the premises of the postoffice, has been canceled.

More than this, the government has withdrawn the appeal to the United States Supreme Court, which was asked to reverse the decision of the United States circuit Court, which refused to grant a permanent injunction. This appeal was dropped upon advice of District Attorney French.

Valuable Advice to Sufferers From Skin Diseases.

Under no circumstances should medicated or plain soap or any preparation containing alcohol or water be used by sufferers from eczema and similar skin troubles. Those things aggravate the trouble and make it impossible for the skin to heal. The new medical compound called Cadum is the best and surest remedy, as it contains neither water nor alcohol. When applied, it excludes the air and other irritating agents, stops the itching at once, and sets up the healing process immediately. Most wonderful cures are reported from all sections. Cadum is just as effective in the treatment of psoriasis, ringworm, pimples, blotches, rash, eruptions, chafings, itching piles, rough, scaly skin, sores, acne, herpes, etc. 1c and 25c. REGARDING

Last Saturday's Opening

. . . OF THE . . .

New Riker-Jaynes Drug Store

At 601 Washington Street

We thank you, the public of Greater Boston, who assisted us in the celebration of our largest, most auspicious and most successful opening of our whole career. In fact, nothing like it has ever been witnessed previously in the entire United States on any similar occasion.

Our ability to attract such throngs shows an unmistakable reposal of confidence by you in our methods, a proof of your appreciation of our efforts to give the city of Boston modern drug store service, to maintain low prices for the highest quality of drugs, and we desire to express our heartfelt thanks for your support.

It was impossible to keep accurate count of the number of customers. A few weeks previously, however, at our Lowell opening we had 14,000 present, and as the receipts in the Washington Street Store were almost double, a conservative estimate would give us twenty-five thousand. We gave out fifteen thousand two hundred and fifty souvenirs and were 2,300 short. These figures will give you some impression of the stupendous business transacted.

SOUVENIRS OF GUTH CHOCOLATES

To those who came after our supply was exhausted and who now hold a check entitling them to this souvenir, we want to say that we have already communicated with Mr. Guth in Baltimore and work will be started immediately on a fresh supply. These we expect to receive within a week or 10 days and their arrival will be announced in all the newspapers. We gave out almost a ton of Guth's, and were fortunate in having 2,500 packages of our high grade Excello Chocolates in reserve, which were also exhausted.

TOOTH POWDER AND VIOLET CERATE SOUVENIRS

To holders of coupons for Tooth Powder and Cerate we are pleased to announce that a fresh stock will be received next Wednesday morning from our New York Laboratory and coupons will be redeemed any time after that date.

SPECIAL PRICES

If you happened in while we were temporarily out of some advertised article, come in any day during the week, tell the clerk you were unable to purchase that article on the opening day and we will give you the benefit of opening day prices.

WE WANT TO PLEASE YOU

We know that you will take into consideration the conditions existing Saturday and how easily possible it was for us to underestimate the remarkable attendance, but we want to make amends for the disappointment caused you and will make every possible effort to get prompt delivery of more souvenirs. If you live out of town, or for some other reason do not find it convenient to call for your souvenir when we receive them, mail us your check and we will send it to you, charges prepaid, and don't forget that you can get that advertised price any time this week by simply telling the clerk.

POLICE GUARD CARUSO FROM 'BLACK HAND'

Fearing that members of the dreaded Black Hand society have followed him to this city with the intention of carrying out their threats of violence, Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, is at the Hotel Lenox to-day, guarded by a corps of detectives from the Italian branch of the New York police department.

Caruso is accompanied by Gatti-Casazza, the director of the Metropolitan Opera House, and Director Henry Russell, of the Boston Opera House, who is also associate director of the Metropolitan Opera House. The rest of the company arrived to-day.

Mme. Mazarin, who has created such a sensation with her performances in "Elektra," and Mme. Louisa Tetrazzini the noted soprano, are also here with the vanguard of the Manhattan Opera Company.

With these two great singers are the bassos M. Henry Scotti, M. Constantin Nicolay and M. Gustave Huberdeau, the baritone M. Giovanni Polese and the tenors M. David Devries, M. Emilio Venturini and M. Pierre Lassen all of the Manhattan Opera Company.

Mme. Augusta Dochs, herself a former Bostonian is also here with the troupe.

More Singers Coming.

The sixteen principals who are in this city now are only those billed to sing in the performances of to-day and to-morrow and are only a small part of the number of singers who will appear before the engagement of the Manhattan Opera Company in this city is closed.

Another batch of singers, together with the remainder of the singers, chorus and orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera Company are due to arrive in Boston to-day. Several car loads of scenery for the immense and unusually large settings are also on their way here.

The members of the Manhattan Opera Company were the first to arrive at the South station. They made a special train of nine cars and the entire troupe of 200, including the principals, chorus and orchestra, were hurried to the various hotels in half a hundred taxi cabs. Most of them were taken to the Lenox while the others were accommodated elsewhere.

The cars of the Metropolitan Opera Company arrived half an hour later. A cordon of police was thrown about Caruso as he stepped from the train and grasped the hand of Henry Baker, press agent of the Boston Opera House.

Caruso Not Worried.

"My previous visits to this beautiful city of yours," Caruso said, "have been of a delightful nature, and I always enjoy my visits here.

"To Boston this year I come a little different, inasmuch as there are three members of the Italian force of the New York Police Department with me. This is not of protection, but I am very sure that no harm will befall me while I am here.

Mme. Louise Homer, accompanied by her husband, came on another train and went at once to the Touraine.

Some time this afternoon the remainders of the company, including Destinn, Sparkes, Farrar, Dereyn, Mapleson, Di Pasquale, Cerri, Bornigia, Malatesta, Polese, Ivea, De Lievin, Gluck, Amato, Rossi, De Segurola, Bada, Resenthi, Martin, Scotti, Gianoli-Tailetti, Wuiman, Bourgois, Reichelman, Dufau, Dippel, Podesti, Mordkine, Saracco, Norandi, Asanina, Tecchi, Gilly, Bureel, Devaux, Dua, Targa, Bieak, Soomer, Goritz, Blass, Hall, Bayer, Otto and Knox will arrive.

New Singer to Boston.

Mme. Mazarin of the Manhattan Opera Company cannot speak English but is delighted at the chance of singing before a Boston audience. When seen at the Parker House she talked through an interpreter and said:

"Never have I been so eager to sing to a new audience as I am to sing here. We folks from abroad have a very definite idea of American appreciation of opera, and I feel hopefully entirely justified in my disapproval or an opera.

"You have some writers of opera here," she continued. "The 'Pipe of Desire,' by Converse, is a very beautiful opera, and then, people realize here. But it is remarkable that operas have been produced abroad that have been unknown until their return from a success in America. Ameleta is the son of the great composer Puccini, a critical though appreciative audience.

"Boston audiences, I am told, are the best in this country. You are why I am so eager to sing here."

THOUSANDS RETURN TO THEIR OLD JOBS

PHILADELPHIA, March 28.—Thousands of workers, called out more than three weeks ago in the general strike supporting the carmen, returned to work to-day, following the order yesterday of the Central Labor Union. Early in the day, however, the unions began to receive complaints from workers that their places had been filled and that they were left idle. It was declared that a general campaign of adjustment would be necessary to restore the conditions of the days before the strike.

MAKING ENDS MEET

VICTOR RECORD OF NEW TENOR

The exclusive services of John McCormack, the meteoric famous Irish tenor, have been secured by the Victor Talking Machine Company for its records, and the patrons of the Victor will now be able to have McCormack sing in their homes whenever they desire.

This is one of the new "finds" of the Victor Company, which is constantly adding to its long lists of record attractions. The McCormack records are entirely new, and they are among the great features offered among the Victor records for April which are now on sale in Boston by the Oliver Ditson Company.

Frances Alda is another artist who is now making records exclusively for the Victor. Her two Odeon records on the April lists of the Victor Talking Machine Company. The series of Faust records is filled with further notable additions by another complete set of Faust—a superb rendition of the inspiring church scene, sung by Farrar, Journet and the Metropolitan Opera chorus.

George Maynard, Mrs. Eastman's grandson, is said to have turned the strikes to clockdom about a year ago. The little old three-story house in the Fan hasn't looked quite the same since.

"FIVE STICKS" STORY REVIVED

BOLTON, March 28.—The serious injury of Mrs. Sarah Eastman, eighty-five years old, who fractured her right hip yesterday and is a patient in Clinton Hospital, has revived in Bolton the famous story of the "Five Sticks of Wood."

Thirty-five years ago Sarah said to George, her husband: "You better get in some wood, George."

"Sucks," said George, "there's wood in the box."

"There's five sticks there that mother brought in," said Mrs. Eastman.

"Well," said George, who was set in his ways, "burn one."

"You bring in some wood," said his wife.

"You burn what's there in the box," say her husband.

"Not if it stays there till it rots," said Mrs. Eastman.

They buried George five years ago, and folks who went to the funeral and who tell this story declare that the five sticks were still there in the wood box back of the kitchen stove.

TWO OF TRIPLETS HOPELESSLY MIXED

WORCESTER, March 28.—There has been a little mixup at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kelley, 6 Grand No. 20 Fort street, where triplets were born February 11. Two of the triplets are boys, and they are the cause of the trouble. Their identities have become mixed, and now the Kanarians and their friends are trying to solve the puzzle that has resulted. One was named Andrew and the other Peter, but names don't help out. Sarah says he has brains, for all the parents know.

NEW SYNDICATE TO CONTROL DIAMONDS

NEW YORK, March 28.—Maiden Lane has learned that a new syndicate, the third in the trade, has been formed and inked over the new diamond mines in German Southwest Africa. The output, which for a year ago was insignificant, has increased to 60,000 carats a month, and although small they are said to be of the finest water in brilliance. There are not enough diamond cutters to cut the supply.

CRACK DRUMMERS TO BEAT FOR PRIZE

The Father Mathew Drum Corps of Springfield, one of the crack drum corps of the New England district, will vie against the P. F. Williams Fife and Drum Corps of Brooklyn, N. Y., to see which is the champion fife and drum corps. The Springfield corps is preparing to "blow itself" to the limit. The contest is for four pairs of Brooklyn at an early date for a purse to be put up by the two corps.

PASTOR SERVES ONE CHURCH 50 YEARS

On April 1 the Rev. James Reed will observe the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the pastorate of the church of the New Jerusalem on Bowdoin square, Beacon Hill. His present parishioners are the large part the children and grandchildren of those with whom he was first associated in the work of the church. There will be a golden jubilee celebration, for which the members of the church are making arrangements.

The Menagerie

Giant Hippo in Wrong Show.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Ringling Brothers' imported blood-sweating hippo, weighing about three tons, got lost and was hunted for four days. While circus agents ran up and down the land and railway men kept telegraph wires hot, Barnum & Bailey's show was trying to take care of the appetite of a monster which they didn't own and didn't want. Nor could they tell how they came into possession of the beast. The animal strayed into the wrong show through a blunder.

Ground Hog a "Four Flusher."

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Professor Moore, the weather boss, says the ground hog is a fraud and four-flusher. "What did he do this year? Did he make good? Not a bit of it. He crawled out of his hole on February 2, saw his shadow, got his picture in every paper, and then took it back to his lair, leaving behind the idea that the middle of February and all March would be marked by bad weather."

"Rooster" Lays Two Eggs.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 28.—After F. R. Glover of Lisle got a large rooster ready for a chicken show it laid an egg, thereby putting the hen that lays money and the hen that produces red and white eggs into the "has been" novelty class. Experts at the farm professors here, the rooster laid an egg in its box to confirm the report that despite its masculine markings it was a hen.

New Jersey Parrot a Suicide.

DENVILLE, N. J., March 28.—Joseph Craine, a taxidermist, has discovered that Miss Abby Cramer's parrot committed suicide. In despair because his owner had gone away, Pol stabbed herself with her own beak. The wound pierced her heart. The bird will be mounted as evidence of parrot love and grief.

Killed by a Colt's Kick.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 28.—John Emerson of Auburn was trying to catch a colt, when the animal suddenly turned and kicked him in the head, breaking his neck. Mrs. Emerson and her seven-year-old daughter witnessed the accident.

Butterflies as Hat Ornaments.

BAYONNE, N. J., March 28.—Butterflies added to the beauty of Easter headgear here. While gorgeous hats were parading the streets butterflies appeared and circled the creations, being attracted by foliage, feathers and flowers.

TAFT, IGNORED, MUST BATTLE FOR HIS BILLS

WASHINGTON, March 28.—President Taft will have to fight hard if he expects to get any legislation through at this session. Congress has been in session four months, lacking a few days, yet the administration measure recommended by the President in his annual message sent to Congress in December has not been forwarded to him for his signature.

If the desire of the members to force as many measures as possible into that half of President Taft's legislative program will go over until next session. An examination of the record gives this result.

The House in December passed the bill to admit Arizona and New Mexico to statehood by a unanimous vote. These bills have been ordered reported to the Senate with some amendments, but no date has been set for their consideration. The House Committee on Merchant Marines and Fisheries, by a party vote, reported the ship subsidy bill, which has been on the calendar for several weeks. With no indication when the leaders will bring the matter before the House. The railroad bill, which provides for a commerce court of appeals, was reported to the House last week after having been considered by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee since January 10.

Find "Joker" in Bill.

This measure will provoke a heated debate, as the railroads, clothed in their own raiment, in so many words, charge that the bill if enacted into law in its present form would nullify the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Northern Securities case, thus penalizing the railroad magnates.

President Taft's per mission to grant Federal charters for corporations doing interstate business, his anti-injunction bill, and his conservation bills are still before House committees, where they have been for three months.

The postal savings bank bill, which was introduced in the House and Senate at the opening of the session, has made some progress. The Senate has passed the measure and it is now before the House committee on Postoffices and Post Roads. Friends of the bill say the House committee will report it with numerous amendments early in April, but just when it will be brought before the House in authority seems to know.

Regulars Are Accused.

House insurgents say the delay in the President's legislative program can be charged to the Regulars, who have resisted the attempt to liberalize the rules whereby the House majority could enact legislation.

Now that the Speaker has been eliminated from the rules committee much of the "red tape" which has caused such early action on the administration measures will be eliminated.

It was said this morning by several members of the Republican congressional delegation who attended the White House conference last night that President Taft's program will be considered. The President said he had merely called the conference to get from them their thoughts of the prospects of securing the passage of the bills.

ANOTHER COLLECTOR OF TAXES ACCUSED

Another town tax collector has been arrested charged with larceny of town funds. He is Joseph Cavanaugh, until last August collector for the town of Wenham for 10 years. It is said his shortage may reach $5,000. The discrepancy in his accounts was found by the auditors employed by the town in connection with the collector's books in other Bay State towns.

REVIVALISTS OPEN DORCHESTER WORK

A revival, which will continue until April 17, has been opened in Dorchester by the Rev. H. L. Gale and W. H. Collyson, members of the Chapman-Alexander group of evangelists. Union services will be held for the next ten days at the First Baptist Church and for the succeeding ten days at the First Parish Street Methodist Episcopal Church. Afternoon services will be held at the rooms of the various evangelical churches in the district. The revivalists recently conducted a successful tour of the Canadian Northwest.

MRS. SUNDERLAND, DIVORCED, IS DEAD

RENO, Nev., March 28.—Beulah Stubbs Sunderland, daughter of Traffic Manager J. C. Stubbs of the Harriman lines, who was granted a decree of divorce last week, died suddenly at the home of Mrs. B. F. Brooks, an old classmate at Miss Head's seminary for girls in San Francisco. Mrs. Brooks resides at Berkeley, and Mrs. Sunderland has been staying with her since she was granted her divorce.

BAR LOVE SCENES IN MOVING PICTURES

WORCESTER, March 28.—Having removed out all the crime scenes from moving picture films, the police are now censoring love scenes. The moving picture managers say that with all crime and love cut out, there is little else left for them to show except such uninteresting subjects as wood growing in the Great West, scenes in the Thousand Islands and so on. The managers are talking of making a test case on some censored film.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS ALARMING PHYSICIANS OF GREATER BOSTON

That infantile paralysis, known to the medical profession as anterior poliomyelitis, is becoming alarmingly prevalent, is the statement of Dr. John Lovell Morse of the Harvard Medical School faculty, who, in common with many other prominent physicians throughout the State, has been investigating an exhaustive study of the disease. Although up to the present time no specific treatment has been formulated for this disease, Dr. Morse believes scientific aid can be relied upon to discover a cure which will render the dread infantile scourge amenable to treatment in a large majority of cases.

Massachusetts physicians are especially interested in this disease, because it is more generally in the summer months, and thanks this State has had far more than its equitable proportion of the cases.

Dr. Morse says: Anterior poliomyelitis is not a new disease, but is becoming more common. From 1850 to 1881 there were but twenty-three recorded cases. From 1900 to 1907 the number had increased to 349, and the widespread epidemic of last year brought the number of cases for the past four years up to 6,100. The Harvard Medical School has had seventeen cases in the city alone, although that number is hardly out of proportion to the population and number of children in Boston. The disease is now recognized as fatal in a large majority of cases the victims are left wholly or partially paralyzed or otherwise incapacitated for life.

Late Treatment Best.

"It is hard to make the parents of a victim understand that the disease should not be treated at the start, but that the most treatment during the early stages unquestionably will be beneficial. The symptoms differ widely, but in the average case a perfectly well child is stricken in the night and wails from twenty-four to forty-eight hours one or both of the limbs becomes paralyzed. After three or four weeks the pain disappears and the patient is apparently well. Often the paralysis is not discovered until that time.

"If, however, it is discovered at the outset, there would be no occasion for any massage or osteopathy for three weeks or more, while the spinal cord centres are still inflamed. The best treatment usually tends to aggravate the trouble. After the first two weeks, when the pain and soreness of the paralysis need be feared, and the inflammation which can be dried with safety during the next three weeks is to keep up the nutrition of the muscles, until the inflamed nerves can take up their control again.

Keep Paralyzed Parts Normal.

"In the earlier stages no good can come from any active treatment and in all probability such treatment will prove harmful. During this period the limbs should be kept loosely bandaged, not tightly bandaged, so that the blood may circulate freely. The parts should be carefully supported and in their normal positions. This latter is all important.

"It is not safe to begin vigorous treatment until after the first two weeks, and usually not before four weeks. From that time on, however, vigorous treatment is of the most importance. The muscles must be employed constantly during the next four months. Unless the parts are fully restored within six months from the commencement of the paralysis, it is safe to say in every instance, be permanent. Parents must appreciate their responsibility in this paralysis within the first six months of all ages.

Hoping for Cure.

"Although hundreds of skilled physicians have given years of study to the subject, no specific remedy for the disease is known to the profession up to this time. Hopes are entertained, however, on the eve of such a discovery. Dr. Flexner and Lewis, who have been studying the disease in the Rockefeller Institute in New York, have begun to draw from the blood and within the past few weeks have made marvelous progress. With an experience of over 1,000 cases of the disease and brains of children who died from the disease they have succeeded in their research and have succeeded in immunizing the dog. It will be seen at once that this is the key to the solution of the problem. So far they have never been able to reproduce the disease in any other animal, and I believe this emphatically disproves the statement so prevalent during the recent epidemic that the disease was transmitted through dogs, cats and fowl.

AT 74 OWES FINE HEAD OF HAIR TO CUTICURA

Itching, Scaling Scalp Humor was Making It All Fall Out—Two Doctors Could Not Stop the Trouble—Niece Advised Using Cuticura.

CURED HER SCALP AND MADE HAIR GROW AGAIN

"My mother used to have a very bad humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for a time I had two different doctors to treat her head. It was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out before I got her to Cuticura. One day her niece came in to see her and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and Cuticura did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura? My mother had the same ailment.' Mother did and they helped her, so she soon began bathing with the Cuticura Soap and anointing with the Cuticura Ointment, and in six months' time the itching, burning and scaling of her head was gone and her hair began growing. To-day she feels very much elated to Cuticura. I did for four or five months and my own feet are so much sunny once. Ellsworth Dunham, Hiram, Me., Sept. 30, 1909."

What Barnum Said of Cuticura.

P. T. Barnum, the famous circus man, once wrote: "I have had the Cuticura Remedies among the contents of my medicine chest with me shows for the last three seasons, and I can conscientiously certify that they were very effective in every case which called for their use."

RED SOX HAVE SAFE LEAD OVER CINCINNATI TEAM

DOVES WILL PLAY COBB'S AUGUSTA TEAM ONCE MORE

SPEED BOYS ARE SURE WINNERS IN RED SERIES

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 28.—If ever a team wanted to win a game it was the Reds of yesterday. They wanted to get away with Sunday's contest. Griffith had two of his best pitchers to send against the Speed Boys in Rowan and Covaleski, the southpaw who beat the Giants out of the National League pennant two years ago. What the Red Sox did to these fellows was a caution, and finally Griff, in disgust, sent in his old Georgetown College recruit, Cantrell, to finish out. Cantrell, poor boy, was just as easy.

Catcher Bill Carrigan really leads the team with a batting average of .500. Amos McConnell, however, is tied with him, but has only been at the bat four times. Eddie Kargen's home run in two times at bat gives him an average of .500 also. Jake Stahl leads the regulars with an average of .400. Jake has made nine baseline hits and stolen two bases. Tommy Madden's record is a fine one; he has batted for .400. Myers has been a pinch hitter twice and has failed two times. He comes next with figures of .285, a fine showing for a man who has been only one season in professional baseball.

It must be remembered that these averages were made against first-class pitchers who are now going in world-beating style in mid-season. It is a great record for most of the Red Sox players, the figures of which include every game played to date, follows:

TRAINING CAMP NOTES.

Manager Griffith of the Reds offered Catcher Larry McLean to the Boston Giants, and Pitcher Ames to the Dodgers, but Manager Dreyfuss replied by wire that they had no use for the big fellow. It would not have been a bad idea for the Dodgers to have signed this man up. While Larry is a bad actor he is not a rough-house player, and the one time during the season he will be required, Griffith declared he was through with him and that he will never play with the Reds again. He netted Mobile's owner $1,000, and gave him enough money to get home on.

Larry is batting second at his own request. Donovan thought him too valuable a hitter to be in any but prime position, and him down to batting behind Harry was supervised and wanted to get him up with his old place as the manager consented.

Speaker got some great hitting in Sunday's game. He pulled two men at the plate, including the sweaty Bescher.

This is the way Woodman reasons the thing out: "Jeff will surely whip Johnson, and then we expect Johnson will be easy to approach on the subject of a match with Langford. Our reason for thinking that Jeffries will defeat Johnson is that I believe Langford is a better man than Johnson, and I do not dream for a moment that Langford or a fighter could hold a candle to Jeff. Of course, if Johnson should happen to down Jeffries, it will not deter us camping on Johnson's trail.

"No matter who Johnny defeats, I am still in of the opinion that Langford is Johnson's master. I simply thing it isn't on his cards for Johnson to defeat Jeffries, and as I figure that Johnson will be ready to talk fight with somebody a couple of months after the Fourth of July affair, I have to be of the opinion that a Langford-Johnson match will be one of the star events of next September."

Woodman makes no bones about saying that Johnson is afraid of Langford.

"You will notice," said Woodman, "that whenever Johnson was asked why he did not fight Langford, he replied: 'I've licked him once, and don't want anything more to do with him.' Now to begin with that's not true. Johnson gained a decision over Sam on points once in a fifteen-round bout at Chelsea, but there was no licking at all. Jeffries was also game, and received hard knocks from the man who had won the heavyweight championship from John L. Sullivan. One day when Corbett was feeling good he cut loose at Jeffries and punched him severely. The latter merely laughed as the blows were delivered upon him. Then made the remark: 'Your punches don't hurt me, Jim,' angry for the first time since the men had been together.

"Doesn't it hurt?" asked Corbett testily.

"Not on your life!" laughed the boilermaker.

"Honestly, now, don't my blows hurt?" repeated the great boxer.

"I tell you no," replied Jeffries coolly.

"Then, you big dub!" exclaimed Corbett, "I'll knock you out!" With that the champion tried to do so—and he landed jabs and hooks on Jeff's jaw. He piled in straight punches and smashes on the heart and kidneys until he was weary. But Jeffries refused to go down and out. When Corbett let up the boilermaker was looking horribly at him. After the day's work Delaney went to Jeffries and said: 'Jeff, those punches must have hurt you.'

"Oh my honey, Bill, I hardly felt them," was the response.

"Why, Jeff," said Delaney, "he is punching you as hard as he can, and he may hurt you. The next time he asks if his punches hurt say 'yes.'

"I'll do nothing of the kind," retorted Big Californian. "Let him keep on trying to knock me out and some of these days I'll take a hand in the game myself."

Jeff did nothing of the kind," retorted his cleverness and strength, but the boilermaker did not care to mix with the same old smile. Finally Corbett, white with anger, yelled:

"Damn it, won my that the blows hurt you? Don't they?"

"No, they don't," persisted Jeffries. Then Corbett rushed in and landed on the youthful pugilist. This time Jeffries ran backward and fought back. The men put on a rather, and eye-witnesses say that the fight was one of the fiercest ever waged between two men together.

"Doesn't it hurt?" asked Corbett testily.

"Not on your life!" laughed the boilermaker.

"Honestly, now, don't my blows hurt?" repeated the great boxer.

"I tell you no," replied Jeffries coolly.

The Day Corbett Tried to Stop Jeffries at Carson City

LANGFORD IS SOUGHT BY FIGHT PROMOTERS

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28.—Sam Langford, who defeated Jim Flynn so signally at Los Angeles on St. Patrick's Day, is not likely to find the time hanging heavily on his hands.

Manager Woodman is receiving telegrams from promoters all over the country, and it is evident that Langford is regarded as an excellent card. It almost seems as if Sam, for a while, outdo do his own picking and choosing in regards to his opponents, although, of course, there is high-class pugilistic company where Sam will receive very little welcome.

Langford has already signed to meet two men within the next six weeks. He will box Jim Barry twenty-five rounds at McCarey's Vernon arena, Los Angeles, on April 9, and on April 27 he will meet Stanley Ketchel in a six-round flutter in Philadelphia. The latter event, by the way, bears about the same relation to a regulation prizefight as an oyster cocktail does to an aldermanic banquet, but that's another story and will be dealt with at another time.

Woodman, for obvious reasons, is not boasting Middleweight Champion Ketchel at present. He is pleased to think that Ketchell is willing to meet Langford in any kind of a contest, and he argues that a short bout is better than none at all.

Of the prospects of a fight between Jack Johnson and Langford, Woodman is never done talking. He thinks the pair will be seen in a ring somewhere about next Labor Day.

"Jeff will surely whip Johnson, and then we expect Johnson will be easy to approach on the subject of a match with Langford. Our reason for thinking that Jeffries will defeat Johnson is that I believe Langford is a better man than Johnson, and I do not dream for a moment that Langford or a fighter could hold a candle to Jeff. Of course, if Johnson should happen to down Jeffries, it will not deter us camping on Johnson's trail.

Life and Battles of Jim Jeffries—No. 9.

CHAPTER XII.

Billy Delaney stayed at the Six-Mile House, outside of Frisco, for about a week after Jeffries and Joe McAuliffe had held their camp in a corner of the Coursing Park, and then bought a pair of tickets to Carson City, where Jim Corbett was working for his title battle with Bob Fitzsimmons.

Delaney was training Corbett, and figured that Jeff would be an ideal sparring partner for the champion. And at the same time, wise William saw great possibilities in Jeffries, and figured that he would learn a lot about the game by sparring with Corbett. Bill was nothing the game from both ends.

They finally arrived at Corbett's training camp, and Jeffries was so good natured and made an easy mark, so far as science went, that Corbett took a fancy to him. Jeffries was also game, and received hard knocks from the man who had won the heavyweight championship from John L. Sullivan. One day when Corbett was feeling good he cut loose at Jeffries and punched him severely. The latter merely laughed as the blows were delivered upon him. Then made the remark: "Your punches don't hurt me, Jim," angry for the first time since the men had been together.

"Doesn't it hurt?" asked Corbett testily.

"Not on your life!" laughed the boilermaker.

"Honestly, now, don't my blows hurt?" repeated the great boxer.

"I tell you no," replied Jeffries coolly.

"Then, you big dub!" exclaimed Corbett, "I'll knock you out!" With that the champion tried to do so—and he landed jabs and hooks on Jeff's jaw. He piled in straight punches and smashes on the heart and kidneys until he was weary. But Jeffries refused to go down and out. When Corbett let up the boilermaker was looking horribly at him. After the day's work Delaney went to Jeffries and said: "Jeff, those punches must have hurt you."

"Oh my honey, Bill, I hardly felt them," was the response.

"Why, Jeff," said Delaney, "he is punching you as hard as he can, and he may hurt you. The next time he asks if his punches hurt say 'yes.'

"I'll do nothing of the kind," retorted Big Californian. "Let him keep on trying to knock me out and some of these days I'll take a hand in the game myself."

Jeff did nothing of the kind," retorted his cleverness and strength, but the boilermaker did not care to mix with the same old smile. Finally Corbett, white with anger, yelled:

"Damn it, won my that the blows hurt you? Don't they?"

"No, they don't," persisted Jeffries. Then Corbett rushed in and landed on the youthful pugilist. This time Jeffries ran backward and fought back. The men put on a rather, and eye-witnesses say that the fight was one of the fiercest ever waged between two men together.

"Doesn't it hurt?" asked Corbett testily.

After it was all over Jeffries had a talk with Delaney. Among other things the latter said:

"If that man is the champion of the world and can't hit any harder than that I can whip him or any other man, and I'll prove it. You match me with him, and if I don't win I'll not ask for a cent."

Delaney, however, was too busy with Corbett's training to bother with such talk, but Jeffries mean business Jussathe same, for as soon as Corbett had been beaten by Fitzsimmons Jeff said to Delaney, as the latter was leaving Corbett's dressing room:

"Billy, I can whip both of these fellows!"

"I believe you can, Jim," mused Bill, "and I'll match you with one or the other as soon as possible."

Delaney informed W. A. Brady what he thought Jeffries could do, and Brady caught on. Delaney made matches with Starkey, Peter Jackson and others, over whom Jeffries showed his superiority, and then brought the big fellow East, where he won the championship and became noted the world over. It was not at all strange, therefore, that Delaney was heartbroken when he was supplanted by Tommy Ryan of Syracuse as Jeffries's trainer for the battle with Corbett. Delaney felt that he was entitled to better treatment. The big champion saw it in that light, too, after Delaney had gone back to California with a cup full of sore paw. Having dismissed Ryan he extended the hand of friendship and gratitude to the veteran who was instrumental in making Jeffries what he is.

ALL STAR CARD AT AMERICAN A. C.

The American Athletic Club is on deck this week with another program of hocking bouts that looks equally as good as the one pulled off by the same club last week.

There will be four bouts in all, the make up of the same being as follows: Tommy Flanagan of Cambridge vs. Scotty Cope of Manchester N. H.; Johnny Henderson of Roxbury vs. Chester Walcott of Malden; Dave Breen of the South End vs. Dutch Carr of Charlestown; Arthur Cote, lightweight champion of Maine, vs. Tommy Ryan of South Boston.

There isn't much the matter with that card when you come to look it over.

$30,000 FOR LANGFORD BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28.—Jim Griffin, matchmaker of the Broadway Athletic club, will make a determined effort for a Langford-Ketchel match to take place here Saturday, May 2. The club is willing to guarantee from $25,000 to $30,000 to get the fighters together, and the weights can split the money to suit themselves.

"We will make our best offer," said Griffin. "It will probably be $25,000 for a twenty or twenty-five-round fight. I have not heard a word from Ketchel, but I do not think there will be any trouble to get Langford, for we have been talking to Joe Woodman. And if we can't land Ketchel or Langford, I am sure Ketchel will absolutely refuse to fight the Boston colored man."

LAST WEEK OF PRACTICE FOR DOVES IN SOUTH

By W. H. ROSS.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 28.—There will be another game between the Doves and the Augusta club. This game was originally scheduled for Wednesday, but President Dovey and the local management finally decided to play it on Tuesday.

If Cobb will again lead the Augustans, and another big crowd is predicted. There never was a ball player so popular in his own town as Cobb is. At home he is a happy, light-hearted, fable boy. It is a wonder that the adulation does not turn his head. But when among his townsfolk he shows no more sign of having a swelled cranium than he did a few years ago when, an unsophisticated stripling, he walked from the hotels into Augusta carrying a telescope grip, and asked for a chance to play ball with the local club.

Banquet to Dovey.

Last evening the Augusta press club gave a banquet at one of the oldest and most celebrated restaurants in the State to President John S. C. Dovey and Manager Fred Lake. Colonel T. D. Murphey, editor of the Augusta Chronicle and one of President Taft's closest friends of the South, presided and said Augusta was glad to have the Boston players here and if they are representatives of big league teams in character and manliness they could not be city wanted more to come.

In the old rectangular hall there was some game seemed, which might have been characterized as outside the law. But what helped make the feast flow free was real old hospitality. The Doves were glad to have a period of leisure. Two matinees a day on the ball field for almost a fortnight is something of a stunt. Manager Fred Lake has lost no time.

Plenty of Games Ahead.

There are eleven exhibition games scheduled for the Doves before they get back to old New England. That will give them the benefit, all told, of an even dozen of real contests before the regular season opens. There are enough games to enable Manager Fred Lake to get a line on some of his untried pitchers. All the new twirlers auxious for a try-out to the box in a regular game. The contests ahead of the Doves also give them a chance to get the signal code put over.

The club will show a deal more speed when it gets north of the Ohio River. The weather here, for a week has been hot enough to be enervating, even the natives complaining of the heat, and the members of the club confined a debate as to the effects of the climate. In the back of the woods Dave Shean wrote some verse to the effect that the country is quite hot, heat helps the singer cause a lot, the climate's fine, the scenery's nice, but take me back where I can ice."

HARVARD TRACK MEN OUT TO-DAY

Regular practice for the Harvard track squad preliminary to the outdoor season is scheduled to commence on Soldiers field this afternoon. Though the team has suffered by the graduation of some of its best athletes and by injuries to others, the outlook is far from dark. The Crimson will have about an even chance in the dual meet with Yale, but the real test will be the last year to make a showing in the intercollegiate meet. The outcome of the season will depend largely on the way some of the new material shows up.

SENATORS FINISH TRAINING

NORFOLK, Va., March 28.—The Washington American League team has been training here for the past month, getting ready for the Capital look to way at Richmond, where two games with the Virginia League team of that city will be played.

FOOTBALL WILL BE MADE SAFER, SAYS ELIOT

Does fair Harvard take kindly to the suggestions offered for the reform of football? Listen to this and it ain't no idle chatter either. Says ex-President Charles W. Eliot: "If is plain to see that these rules are a marked improvement and ought to make the game tolerably safe. I use the word tolerably, advisedly, as it is an impossibility to make the game of Rugby safe. These rules which are proposed for adoption make it more possible for a man to play through three years of college football without being seriously hurt. This was not possible under the other regulations. No one can tell to an absolute certainty what real effect the new change will have upon the game until they receive a thorough practical demonstration. It is easy to see that the committee itself is not certain of its lasting reformation. My objections to the game as a collegiate sport was partially softened by the forward revisement and this new doctoring has my approval. The rules are certainly a great improvement."

William T. Garcelon, the graduate manager of athletics at the University also favors the offered amendments. "I think the new rules without insomuch as they will prevent many of the serious injuries that have happened on a base ball play through the line. Oftentimes the player with the ball is seriously injured in this sort of play, the neck and spine being the weak point of attack. All-in-all the game will never be absolutely free from injuries, its chances for serious injuries will be greatly lessened."

President A. Lawrence Lowell didn't care to discuss the old rules or the new ones neither.

Captain Lothrop Withington of the eleven thinks the proposed changes, with perhaps but one exception, excellent.

RICKARD PICKS JOHNSON TO WIN

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., March 28.—Tex Rickard, one of the promoters of the Jeffries-Johnson fight, thinks the black will come out a winner if he takes care of himself from now on. "Jeffries has gone too far back and Johnson should see that he is in good condition," said Rickard. Rickard said the advance sale of seats already had reached $160,000. The promoter is in favor of two referees.

GREAT SEASON OF RACING ON AT BROCKTON

BROCKTON, March 28.—According to Vice-President Fred W. McLaughlin of the Brockton Driving Club, the coming season will be one of the most interesting in the history of the club. The club will hold which race meets can be conducted without friction. During the season between seven and eight meets will be held, alternately in this city and in South Weymouth. Every thing looks bright for the coming race season, which opens here on April 19.

J. E. Philbrick, has added another fast one to his stable, the brown pacer Nemacket, raised by Hiller Brothers, of Marion and raced by them several seasons. Mr. Philbrick also owns the fast trotting gray mare, Miss Cubmgs. It was only the other night that Mr. Philbrick was passing when he spied Joe Hagan of Avon, owner of Cyclone Charlie and King Brino.

"Do you think there's anything in town that can show more class than this one, Joe?" Mr. Philbrick asked. "I guess not," replied Joe, "I think if Mart asked me my honest opinion when he desired to lay a few bolivars on one of this season's races on your speedway I would advise him to plant them on that one of yours, Phil."

Dr. Daniel E. Brown has purchased from Lester Crane of Avon the black trotting mare Grace T., 2.24¼. This mare was formerly owned by Edward Hagan of Bridgewater, and has been to the Cranberry City, and has been to the Cranberry City, trot races several times in past years. Al Wass giving good account of herself.

Maud Estill, the bay mare Trainer Abe Johnson of the Brockton Fair track bought at the New York sale for Charles L. Fuller, formerly secretary of the local club, has been sold by Mr. Fuller to Dr. Percy McLaughlin. The bay is a fine road mare, with a good burst of speed. Pa will start his new stepper in some of the Spring races.

Fred McLaughlin has sold his fast chestnut pacer, Sunshine, to Harry Blanchard of Sandwich, N. H. Mr. Blanchard will race him in the Fall at the fair events in that district.

President Harry C. Briggs of the club has purchased the green mare, Edna Mars, by Mors, a stallion formerly owned by Abe Johnson. Mr. Briggs has purchased Walter Brook Farm, near the Fair Grounds, and will raise colts there.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

WOONSOCKET IS ON THE BOXING map to-night with what promises to be one of the best bouts pulled off in New England for many moons, and a lot of Boston sports are going down to see the scrap. Billy Allen, the featherweight champ of Canada, and Jimmy Wells are to do the mixing, and it looks as if they would do a lot of it in the ten rounds the bout is billed. Allen has mingled with some of the best boys in Philadelphia and New York, and while he has never shown in Boston, local sports are interested and there is quite a demand for the Armory Club to bring him here. Allen has defeated Tommy O'Toole, who boxed a draw at the Armory with Jimmy Walsh, so doing even this, the Boston bantam has no easy task on his hands.

ONE OF NEW YORK'S DOPE WRITers has at last discovered the origin of the expression "dead pipe cinch," which is used so often in betting parlance as any other, with the possible exception of "that's good." Here's the way he tells it:

It is explained that two miners were returning from Brooklyn, where they had stolen lead pipe from municipal houses. One of them had about 100 pounds of the pipe wound around his body and concealed in his overcoat. He did not like the look of a fellow loafing on the forefront and hastened to leave as the cop was entering the cigar store. He succeeded in so doing, but near the edge of the beat and fell into the East River.

"That's the end of him," remarked his pal.

"He'll never rise again."

"But you $10 to dime," said a bystander who was willing to take a chance.

"You're on," said the other as he produced his roll, which the man in the water failed to spear again though once were ready with life preservers and boathooks to save him, the $20 was given to the thief's pal for the stakeholder.

"That was a lead pipe cinch," remarked the thief as he pocketed the money.

NOW COMES A YOUNG MAN FROM Lynn and explains that he has his share of that money the Bankers Association claims is laid away in the savings banks. He says there is a reason and gives it:

Straight Dope, Boston American.

About that $300. I have it in the bank, and we put it on only $10 a week. Every dime, Mass. LITTLE MITT.

His dope is pretty good, too. Coleman did considerable better but then he got $12 a week salary from that Cambridge bank. I wonder if the Lynn man is a bank clerk.

THE AMATEUR BOXERS ARE THERE with bells on in Boston this week. To-night is the big show at Mechanics Hall under the auspices of the B. A. A., when the New England championships will be decided. From what I am told of the entries, it promises to be a hummer from start to finish. Next Friday night the amateurs have another turn, this time at the Armory, when the regular monthly show will be pulled off. There are enough entries to keep things going until mid night. Entries for the Armory show should be made to Ed Walsh, No. 541 Tremont street.

HORSE NOTES WINTER CHAT

"All aboard for Plummer's Ridge at Jordan Hall to-morrow and Wednesday nights," are the expressions heard from horsemen in all quarters. It is settled fact that the trotting horse drama written by Wilbur Durrell will be a huge success.

* * *

A. G. McVey of Dorchester had a very narrow escape recently while driving his three-year-old filly Thelma Trott. He had an attack of vertigo falling from the road cart, and was severely bruised and cut on the head, shoulders and left leg. The filly went on a trot to Bitherie's stable at Readville, escaping without a scratch.

* * *

L. Fred Sanborn, of the Fellsway Driving Club, has secured a new trotter from the West through A. H. Sherrill of Danvers. Little is known of the horse, who is unnamed, but he was selected with much care and it is said this fellow will bear watching...In the races this Sunday April 6 at Combination Park, Medford.

JEFFRIES WILL TOUR WORLD AFTER FIGHT

CHICAGO, March 28.—Jim Jeffries will start his world tour on July 10 according to Sam Berger and there was "No if's in the statement." "Jeff will be," Berger said, following a conference with Harry Frazee, who, with Berger, will manage the world tour. Frazee and Berger decided definitely that Frank Gotch and James J. Corbett will be members of the company. The other principals will be selected later on. The promoters plan to take only champion middleweights and lightweight pugilists along. For this reason they have not yet signed Stanley Ketchel or Ad Wolgast, as they figured that either of these men might lose his title before July 10.

The company will show sixty days in this country and sail for England on September 10. On the trip through Europe some of the champions in the party may take on a few of the foreign fighters.

It is more than likely that Jeffries himself will be called upon to defend his title.

TIGERS BEAT TEXANS.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 28.—The Detroit American League team will play here on April 1. The game with San Antonio was a lively one, won by the Detroits by 12 to 4, but the batting was about even, the San Antonio team really falling down in the field.

SAWYER FIGHTS AT BROCKTON

There is a fine card of boxing sport at Brockton to-night with Tom Sawyer, the champion welterweight of Maine who has been through a heavy campaign this Winter against the topnotchers all over New England, battling with Jack Fitzgerald of Philadelphia.

Fitzgerald has boxed a few times in these parts and always made good as he is a walloper of the hardest kind and as Sawyer is of a similar type there should be some tall huffing in the twelve rounds they are scheduled to go.

The Union A. C. has arranged a fistic card which is as follows: Six rounds, Kid Bell of Boston vs. Haywood Briggs of Brockton; six rounds, Kid McDonald of Southbridge vs. Jack Reardon of Brockton; six rounds, Joe Burchell of Cambridge vs. Peck Lefavor of Brockton.

MURPHY TO LEAD YALE.

NEW HAVEN, March 28. Fred Murphy, who captained last years Yale team, will take the place of Captain Philips, who broke his leg in the game with Penn sylvania at Atlantic City.

Philips will be out of athletic circles for three weeks in order to hasten his recovery as much as possible.

SATURDAY'S BUSINESS SMASHED ALL RECORDS

On Saturday we smashed every record that has been made at our tailor shop in 18 years. We played them coming and going. We put more new business onto the books than we ever did in one day and we delivered more clothes than we ever delivered on any day since we opened at 96 Court street—18 years ago this spring.

This is only interesting to you as it tends to show our ability as a tailoring organization to satisfy you in the matter of a suit (or overcoat). Doesn't it appear reasonable that we can build better clothes for less money than any other tailor in Boston, if it is a fact that we are turning out more suits at $15 to $25 than any 10 other tailors in the city put together?

Every facility that goes with perfect tailoring—the best designers that money can command—a cash capacity that enables us to buy direct from mill agents—a force of expert operators, working under the most ideal sanitary conditions of any employees in America all contribute to the finest fitting, most stylish and by far the most reasonable-priced clothes that you can get anywhere on earth.

The prices—$15 to $25—the styles, Spring 1910—the wear, workmanship and fit, guaranteed absolutely. Deliveries always on time—if you will keep your appointment for the try-on. And don't forget that every Gale & Kent coat is fashioned after our celebrated design with "the front that won't break down." This design is registered as our exclusive pattern and the trade-mark rights will be protected by us against infringements. We have issued a unique circular covering this design, that we will mail to any address on request, with samples of cloth and prices for each. Send for one.

"A Woman Can Get What She Wants"

A Great Love Story of To-day By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Mrs. Dot," the Story of the Play in Which Miss Billie Burke Appears at the Hollis This Week.

The Characters in the Story.

"Mrs. Dot," a charming widow, who has an income of $10,000 a year from the estate of her late husband, a brewer.

Gerald Halpine, gentleman, who is broke and is about to leave England. He is a distant cousin of Lord Hollington. The latter is killed in battle, and Gerald succeeds to the title.

Nellie Sellinger, engaged to Gerald.

Lady Sellinger, her mother.

Charles, Gerald's servant.

James Blenkinsop, and Freddie Perkins, friends to Gerald and "Mrs. Dot."

CHAPTER II—(Continued)

"WHAT on earth are you staring at?" he said nervously. "Don't you like my tie all right?"

But there was something working in Mrs. Dot's mind as she gazed fixedly at her young and handsome nephew. She had already decided upon a plan.

The Sellingers, with Gerald, appeared just then, having motored down together, and Mrs. Dot was quick to notice that Freddie had eyes for Nellie Sellinger and that she returned his glances. Mrs. Dot greeted the company effusively, congratulating Nellie and, when they retired, letting herself alone with Blenkinsop, the confirmed bachelor.

"James," said Mrs. Dot, "do you love me?"

"Passionately," said Blenkinsop, lazily flicking the ash off his cigarette.

"Is there the slightest chance of your falling in love with me?"

"Not so long as I remain in the full possession of my senses."

"Do you want to marry me?"

"No, bless you."

"Would nothing induce you to marry me?"

"Nothing."

"Then listen to me seriously. I want you to do something for me."

"We're not married, but of the same class, haven't we?" said Blenkinsop, nervously.

"Certainly."

"Then you may ask anything else of me."

"I want you to let me make love to you."

"For how long?"

"Only for a week."

Blenkinsop showed most unflattering reluctance. "What have I got to do?" he said.

Mrs. Dot outlined her plan, to the amazement of Blenkinsop, who nervously then thrust her long lashes at Gerald.

"You see, last time I thought I was in love with you. Now I know I'm not."

"I'm glad you got over it so quickly," said Gerald bitterly.

"You couldn't wish me to continue eating my heart out for a man who is going to marry some one else."

"Of course, not. I was a fool to think you ever cared at all."

"Why should you think it when you took the greatest pains to assure me that you didn't care two straws for me?"

Mrs. Dot laughed gleefully. She was in her element now with this angry young man at her mercy.

"Oh, Dot! Dot, I wish we were back again. I've had such rotten luck."

"But when I saw that my sweetness was likely to be wasted I made up my mind to cure myself. First I cried for two days."

"Dot," tenderly.

"Oh, don't sympathize! After that I ordered some new frocks and a diamond bracelet."

"And that I suppose thoroughly cured you?"

"It helped."

Gerald turned to her furiously. "I think you must be quite heartless," he exclaimed.

"Ah, that's what I said to you a month ago."

"And now, perhaps, you'd like to know what my feelings are toward you," said Gerald, bitterly.

"I am quite indifferent, thanks."

"I could tell you," he stormed, "and I wish I'd never set eyes on you," with which parting shot he snatched his hat and marched into the house.

Mrs. Dot gazed after him, a little smile, half mirthful, half tender, gathering at the corner of her lips. Then, gathering her lacy skirts in one hand, she pirouetted across the green lawn. "I'll marry you yet," she chanted gaily. "I'll marry you yet, she" chanted

CHAPTER III.

THE marriage license was ready. The next thing was to make Freddie and Nellie rite advantage of it.

Both they were growing more and more engrossed in each others' society. Gerald bored Nellie, but with Freddie she was never dull. There were walks in the woods, long hours on the river, solos to be sung, duets to be played. Oh! there were a thousand enchanting things to do with Freddie.

Gerald looked on indifferently, and if he couldn't have Mrs. Dot nothing else was of real importance.

As for that busy little person, she went ahead with her plotting, throwing Freddie and Nellie together, without appearing to do so. Her chief trouble lay with James, who was aggravatingly lukewarm in his love-making.

"You're so cold you don't give me half a chance," she complained. "What would you do if I really did make love to you?"

Blenkinsop held up his hands in horror. "Don't," he said. "The mere suggestion makes me shiver."

"Good heavens, James, can't you throw just a little passion into your behavior? Look at me as though you loved me."

Blenkinsop looked at her in sombre silence a moment or two; then a slow smile spread over his face. "I'll try it," he murmured.

He Acts the Ardent Lover

And for the next fifteen minutes he made such vigorous love as to nearly frighten Mrs. Dot out of her wits.

"My Dear James, you are really piling it on too much. She exclaimed after a particularly florid declaration on James's part.

"But I mean it. Can't you see I'm madly in love with you?" he cried, catching her in his arms and kissing her repeatedly.

"How's that for passion," he demanded of Aunt Eliza, who had been an amused spectator of the scene. Mrs. Dot fled into the next room. But if Aunt Eliza had been engaged, not so Gerald Hollington, who stood glaring in the doorway.

"What's the meaning of this tomfoolery, Blenkinsop? What do you mean by kissing Mrs. Dot. You'd better get out as quickly as possible. You are acting like a silly old fool."

"Not at all," said Blenkinsop, serenely, "perhaps you may be surprised to see this document." And, walking over to Mrs. Dot's desk he opened a drawer and drew out a folded paper. "Read that."

"A marriage license between James Blenkinsop and Frances Worthley!" gasped Gerald.

"Exactly."

"I don't believe it!" shouted Gerald, tearing the license into a thousand bits and rushing from the room.

Presently Mrs. Dot stole back her face full of mirthful triumph. "I've got even with James for fooling me," she murmured. "James, I know you love me and you've made me so happy."

Freddie Finds the License

"Yes, yes," said James hurriedly, "but I know you love Gerald. I couldn't think of allowing you to sacrifice yourself."

"I did love Gerald, but now" a tender pause.

"But I don't really love you," said the distracted Blenkinsop. "I don't love any one. I never will love any one."

"Oh, James, I don't believe you; and we will be so happy," turning her back to comfort her daughter. "Good-by for a while, darling; I must leave you just a minute."

Nellie and Freddie were not happy. Everybody seemed to be sending her off with Gerald all the time, and Lady Sellinger had settled on the day for the wedding.

She loved Freddie. She knew now that she had never loved Gerald. Her love had come on gradually she hardly knew when it began. Yes, it began by her being sorry for Freddie and his hopeless love for her, that was how it began.

And Freddie felt the same way. If Mrs. Dot had not told him of Nellie's love for him he might never have known this wonderful love he now felt for Nellie. And she was bound to marry Gerald. He ruffled the papers angrily as he looked through the drawers of Mrs. Dot's desk for a letter she had asked him to answer.

What was that parchment looking document? He opened it curiously. "What!" a marriage license made out in the name of Frederick Perkins and Eleanor Sellinger—his Nellie! What could it mean?

Freddie and Nellie Elope

His hand trembled. "Nellie!" he cried, hoarsely.

"Yes?" cried Nellie, turning from the piano, where she had been idly strumming until their own get waltz.

"Look at this," he gasped.

The two young people looked at each other. "Let us use it," pleaded Freddie

"No, no," cried Nellie.

"I love you," urged Freddie.

"Wait until I get my hat," said Nellie.

Half an hour later the butler brought a note to Mrs. Dot. "Miss Sellinger told me to wait," he explained.

"Listen to this," cried Mrs. Dot.

"Dear Mrs. Dot: I'm just off to marry Freddie. Break it to mamma gently."

"How horrible!" cried Lady Sellinger. "We'll follow them by motor and I'll insist on her marrying Gerald at once. I'll be ready in a moment," rushing into the house.

Mrs. Dot smiled archly to herself. She knew they would never catch them, for had not she herself procured every tire on the only motor in Lady Sellinger's command?

So while every one else ran hither and thither in consternation, Mrs. Dot sat calmly gazing out over the river. Some one touched her softly on the shoulder. "I'm a cad," murmured in her ear, "a short time ago you asked me a question. I've answer it now."

"I don't remember it," with a little yawn. "It could not have been very important."

"You asked me if I loved you."

"And do you?"

"With all my heart, and I've loved you passionately from the first moment I saw you."

"Then, Gerald, you were cured of your passion for Nellie in a month; a week in Paris will make your heart whole once more."

"Are you sending me off, to any charms?" said Gerald, with a look in his face which told quite plainly that he hadn't got very far as yet, so good-by. He moved slowly toward the door, turning back as he neared it.

He was almost at the door once more in the arbor. A little sound of a sob reached Mrs. Dot's ears. Gerald came quickly to her.

"You silly little girl," he murmured, holding her close in his arms.

Here ends the story of "Mrs. Dot," but to see it acted and spend an enjoyable evening go to the Hollis and see winsome Billie Burke as Mrs. Dot.

Letters of a Worldly Woman to Her Son

Telling Him It Is More Important That HE Loves the Girl He Is to Marry Than That SHE Loves HIM

By DOROTHY DIX

MY DEAR SON: You want to know by what infallible sign a man may know when he is really, genuinely in love—when he has a case of incurable heart complaint, or when he is merely afflicted by a passing fancy.

Alas, my son, you have asked the riddle of the ages that nobody yet has been able to answer, for the symptoms in the fatal attack and the spasmodic ease that you will be entirely reassured from within a week, are precisely the same. In both you have the same gone feeling, the same heebie fever, the same thrills and palpitations, the same illusions that make you see an ordinary, commonplace sort of girl as a pin-feathered angel, and the same delicious desire to bathe irrational nonsense to her.

When you are first smitten down by this malady there is no earthly way to tell whether it is love or lovelits, yet on a man's ability to correctly diagnose his own case depends much more than life or death. His happiness and that of the woman are at stake.

The One Important Thing

In matrimony, son, the important thing is not so much whether you pick out the ideal girl, or the girl who is really most suited to you, or even the best girl, as it is for you to be head over heels in love with her.

In the days of courtship we are always asking the party of the other part: "Do you love me? Are you utterly, entirely sure that you will never love any one but me?" If we were wiser, we would not waste any breath on that query. Instead, we should spend our time with our fingers on our own pulses, and our thermometers on our own hearts, asking ourselves: "Do I really love this man or this woman? Am I utterly and entirely sure that I shall never weary of him or her?"

For if we love enough, that blinds us to the other one's faults. If we love enough, we never grow weary of the other one. If we love enough, we never cease to thrill at the touch of the adored hand, or the glance of the beloved eyes, but when our own love fails, son, not all the virtues, nor all the beauties, nor all the charms of all the fascinators that ever lived could raise one single throb in our breasts. When you cease to love, son, the game is played out, the romance is over, the curtain is down, and all the balance is embers, ashes and dust.

Therefore, don't worry so much about whether the girl loves you, as whether you love the girl, for a man starts matrimony with practically all of the available supply of domestic affection he is ever going to have, and he needs a pretty big deposit of it to stand the drafts that family life makes upon it.

What Married Life Means

Married life doesn't mean always having by your side a bewitching creature in her prettiest frock and her gayest humor. It means thirty or forty years of the society of a woman whom you will often have to see with her false hair off and cold cream on; a woman with nerves and temper, a woman who will be sick and irritable often; a woman who will be unjust and unlovely many a time; and unless you feel that she is just as attractive to you with her wax pulled off as on, then go in peace, and leave her to marry some one whose devotion is greater than yours. Save yourself, and spare the girl, son.

Of one thing I warn you, son—test your love well and see whether it be of the senses or the soul; for if it be of the senses it will be a quick, fierce fire of tinder that will burn itself out swiftly and leave your heartstone cold and desolate, but if it be of the soul it will be a sacred flame, miraculously fed from on high, that will burn as long as you live upon the altar of home. The reason that there are so many unhappy marriages is because so many people mistake physical attraction for deathless affection, and when passion is dead, all is dead for them.

Another test to apply to your love is the quality of congeniality.

The poet says, "Unless you can muse all day in a crowd on an absent face that has fixed you, then never say you love." Rats! The acid test of love is not distance, but unlimited doses of people's guilty. Any of us can dream about a person that is far away and see her in a halo of romance, but the thing to try is the fondest fancy is to spend a long, hot Summer day with the same girl, and if by the end of it does not find you yawning, gaping for more of her conversation, and thanking God for having given you a clear brain and a big, strong body so that you can take care of her; if it makes you roll up your sleeves and set your jaws, and go at your work like a tiger because every look brings her closer to you and makes the little home of your vision more of a reality, then, son, you may safely conclude that you've got the genuine article of affection, that is all wood and a yard wide, and that will stand the wear and tear of matrimonial life.

But in love, as in law, "Caveat emptor." "Be sure you are right, then go ahead." Your loving MOTHER.

TUDOR TEA

Goes twice as far

More packages of this tea are sold in Boston than of any other brand. Sold everywhere.

EMBARRASSING

A STREET car was going down a busy street, and was already comfortably full, when it was hailed by a laboring man much the worse for liquor, who presently staggered along the car between two rows of well-dressed people, regardless of polished shoes and tender feet.

Curses and complaints arose on all sides, and demands were heard that the offender should be ejected at once. But amid the storm of abuse one friendly voice was raised, and a benevolent clergyman rose from his seat, saying:

"No no! Let the man sit down and be quiet."

The discomfiture of the party turned to mirth when the drunken one seized his benefactor by the hand, exclaiming:

"Thank yo, sir—thank ye! I see you know what it is to be tight."

Too Much Restraint Injures Health of Children

By WINIFRED BLACKEY.

DR. E. H. ARNOLD of New Haven says that little girls are too good to be healthy.

Curvature of the spine, says the doctor, frequently results from sitting in a certain position in school, and eight girls are thus affected to one boy.

That's because the boys are so full of devilry that they won't sit still, no matter what the teacher says; but the girls are so anxious to please teacher that they sit still—too still— and get curvature of the spine.

There, now, girls, you see what you get for being too good.

I never go into a modern schoolhouse in a big city without wanting to start in and stir things up.

We bring about our schools, and our teachers, and our studies, and our books, and we turn out children with curvature of the spine and Saint Vitus' dance and every disease that comes from too much restraint and too little common sense.

It is trying to be in the room with a lot of restless, shuffling, noisy children.

It's a good deal more trying to have curvature of the spin. And any teacher who is so nervous she "simply can't stand it" to see the children fidget has no business to be a school teacher at all.

I went into a public school in a large Western city not long ago, and in the principal's office I saw a boy standing in the corner with his face to the wall. I saw him there at 1 o'clock, and when I came back from my round through the building at half-past 3 that boy was still standing with his face to the wall in the corner of the principal's room.

"What has he done?" I asked the principal.

"Oh, he's such a digester," said the principal. "He drives all the teachers crazy. I'm trying to make him learn to stand still."

And a lot of little, anemic, slothful creatures, who weren't worthy of the name of boy at all, kept in the school, to effeminize it beyond all hope.

Schools are not run for your benefit, Madame Teacher. They are run for our children. If you are too tired and too "nervous" to stand the natural restlessness of a healthy child, go somewhere and dig holt for a living.

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

"THAT will be $1.25, please," said the druggist, as he handed the white-papered, red-sealed bottle across the counter to his customer.

"One twenty-five!" exclaimed the customer, astonished.

"One twenty-five, please!" repeated the druggist.

"Come—come!" protested the customer. "Seems to me that's rather a big price, isn't it?"

"No, sir!" smiled the superior vender. "The drugs in that prescription are very costly."

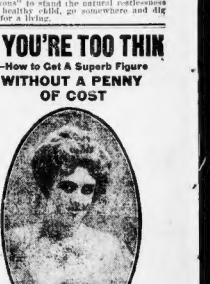
The customer closed one eye, meditatively.

"You know, I'm a druggist myself," he coughed.

"I beg your pardon!" exclaimed the man behind the "patterns." "Of course. I'll charge you cost price. You should have told me before. That'll be a quarter, please!"

IF YOU'RE TOO THIN

—How to Get A Superb Figure WITHOUT A PENNY OF COST



All you have to do is to write, saying, Send me your free treatment and illustrated booklet," We send you, absolutely without a penny or cost, Dr. Whitney's Free Builder—a treatment that has been delighting women with its permanent results for over ten years.

If there is any part of your figure which is underdeveloped—if your bust is too small—if your shoulders, arms or limbs are not prettily rounded —if there are hollows in your cheeks, neck or upper chest, this treatment will convince you that by its use you may quickly acquire a beautifully developed bust, shapely neck and shoulders, handsomely rounded arms and properly developed limbs.

It makes no difference whether your thinness is caused by sickness or inheritance. Dr. Whitney's Flesh Builder acts directly on the fat-producer cells and fills out all the hollow places.

Being a purely vegetable preparation, it gives a better tint to the complexion and a finer texture to the skin by its perfect blood-making qualities.

Treatment No. 1 is the general system flesh builder for both men and women. No. 3 is for giving development to the bust without enlarging other parts of the body. Please say which treatment you prefer, as only one sample can be sent.

The sample proves these facts. Remember, the trial costs you nothing. But if advertising this free trial overcrowds us, it will be withdrawn so don't delay—write now.

Conductor—Mr. Toscanini.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The hero of a play in which John Drew was seen here not long ago was a man who never could make up his mind. When asked whether he preferred Egyptian or Turkish cigarettes he refused both because he could not make a decision.

The music loving public of Boston is in much the same dilemma with regard to the rival opera openings to-night. At the Boston Opera House is the Metropolitan company with a gala performance of "Aida." The cast includes Emmy Destinn, Louise Homer, Caruso and Amato, four of the greatest singers living. "Aida" is a most spectacular and beautiful opera and though familiar to many it has seldom been sung by such a wonderful cast.

And yet, if you hear "Aida" you miss "Elektra."

"Elektra" is the latest music drama of Richard Strauss, composer of "Salome." It is the sensation of the year, and has never been sung in Boston before. Mme. Garin, the great French dramatic soprano, will sing the title role, and the same cast which was heard in New York will surround her. "Elektra" may never be performed in Boston again, for Hammerstein declares he will never return, and it is not the sort of work likely to be added to the Boston company's repertory.

Both operas therefore are on the scene, and to-night and to-day the Boston Opera House and the Boston Theatre resound with the scraping and banging of orchestras, tuning up and the shrieking of singers in the throes of rehearsal.

The performance of the Manhattan company begins to-night at 8:30 o'clock.

The 50g singers of the Metropolitan Opera Company are located at the Lenox and the Touraine and Hammerstein's songbirds are stopping at the Touraine and the Bellevue.

Oscar himself will live at the Touraine during the week, while Gatti-Casazza expects to put up at the Lenox.

London is hearing "Elektra" at the same time as Boston, but Strauss himself is conducting the orchestra at Covent Garden.

Story of "Elektra" Operatic Novelty Sung Here Tonight

"Elektra," to-night's bill at the Boston Theatre, is the most talked-of musical composition of the year. It is Strauss's fourth music drama, and was produced first January 25, 1909, at Dresden. The text is Hugo von Hofmannsthal's play of the same name, described by the author as "after Sophocles." The French version used by Oscar Hammerstein is by M. Gauthiers-Villars.

Ten years before the action of the play King Agamemnon on his return from the Trojan war was slain in his palace in Corinth by his wife, Klytemnestra, and Aegisthus, the faithless friend whom he had left to protect his interests during his absence. The Queen Mother has banished Orestes, their son, and subjected their daughters, Elektra and Chrysothemis, to servile indignities, which, while they accentuated Chrysothemis's womanhood, drive Elektra to the verge of insanity. The dominating note of which is revenge upon her mother and her paramour for the murder of her beloved father, Agamemnon.

Such is the situation when the curtain rises showing us the rear courtyard of Agamemnon's palace. The serving women grouped around the well discuss Elektra and await her appearance made daily at that hour. She comes on the scene, wild eyed and tigerlike. As is her wont, she calls aloud upon the spirit of her murdered parent, rehearses the awful story of his fate and predicts the time when his shade shall be propitiated by the death of the Queen and Aegisthus, and she, his child, shall "dance the royal dances at his tomb."

Chrysothemis, entering, tells her that Klytemnestra and Aegisthus are plotting to throw them in a dungeon. Elektra replies with a news worthily. She seeks to awaken in Chrysothemis the same spirit of revenge which possesses her, but the younger sister's thought is of life, love and motherhood. Her timid feminine attitude rouses Elektra's contempt.

Suddenly a noise is heard outside. It is sacrilege by Klytemnestra, who presently comes from the palace. She is pursued by evil phantoms and horrid dreams

"When the night blood shall leap from beneath the hatchet," says Elektra, "all thy dreams shall die." The new rain blood and the blood of Aegisthus that alone will propitiate the gods.

This thrilling interview between Klytemnestra and Elektra is interrupted when fine news is brought to the queen of the death of the banished Orestes. Elektra on hearing of it decides that she and Chrysothemis must themselves perform the deadly act of slaying their mother and Aegisthus. Chrysothemis persistently refuses, and at last escapes into the house.

"I hate thee!" exclaims Elektra, "I'll do the work alone."

She is creeping along the walls to the threshold of the door when a stranger enters. It is only after much parley that Orestes reveals himself and learns that she is his sister in the most beautiful episode of the drama. Orestes has come in person to give life to the reports of his death and accomplish the vengeance for which Elektra has long yearned. Orestes and his foster father, who has accompanied him, enter the palace, leaving Elektra waiting outside in fevered delight.

Suddenly from within is heard a piercing cry of Klytemnestra. "Strike! Strike again!" shrieks Elektra in mounting glee. The bloody work is progressing. Presently Aegisthus, returning from the hunt, enters through the door of the court. Elektra in the procession of beasts being led to the sedan a fresh and more terrible sacrifice for him to fight him in. He enters the palace. First silence follows, then a noise from Aegisthus appears at the window shouting "Help! Murder! Does no one hear me?"

Elektra, raising herself, cries back: "Agamemnon hears thee!" Again Aegisthus's face appears at the window and again he is dragged away. There is triumph in Elektra and cries of "Orestes!" Aegisthus, the Klytemnestra, has met his fate, and the drama concludes with Elektra expiring exhausted by her sacred dance expressive of her delirious ecstasy at the accomplishment of her revenge and the propitiation of the shade of Agamemnon.

SHOWING PROPER RESENTMENT

"Bill, what share did you get of your grandfather's estate?"

"I got what was left after every other teller had been provided for."

"Then you are the residuary legatee."

Inconsistency of Woman

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

HOW absurdly inconsistent some women are! I know of one who will spend half a day going from one shop to another trying to get a dollar article for ninety-eight cents!

I don't think she ever buys anything until she has canvassed every good shop to see if she can't get it for just a little less.

She seems never to consider the loss of time, the carfare, the wear on her clothes. She thinks only of the few cents she has saved. She is possessed with a sort of mania for getting things at a little less than they are worth. (A form of mania shared by many women.)

She is not deceived by misleading advertisements or placards. She knows the value of things and is determined to get them a little under that value.

In other ways she is not at all penurious or mercenary. She will get the best seats at a matinee and go to an expensive place for tea afterward. She will spend several dollars a week to keep her hair marcelled. She will take expensive treatment that she does not need, or some fashionable "fadder" of a physician.

She will spend money freely in many needless, foolish ways. But when she goes "shopping" a dollar suddenly acquires a value out of all proportion to that it has for her at any other time. Her mind becomes concentrated on but one thing: the desire to "save" to get things at the lowest possible price.

She goes about her quest for bargains in a luminous glow about his quest for prey. It becomes a passion with her, just as hunting game becomes a passion with a man.

The moment she enters a department and at a cost of $2 has herself massaged store she becomes keen, intent, alert. And she is well versed in it all. She knows the stores, she knows the goods, she knows the prices.

She knows no so many women do, buys out of date or inferior goods merely because they are cheap. She makes her own special estimate of bargain and "recognizes wants" and "odds and ends." If something is there that she wants, something that is good and real under value, she seems to instinctively to find it. If not she searches on.

She has cash in New York, most of her life, and, etc., I doubt if any shop has ever made anything by her patronage.

A favorite scheme of department stores is to advertise some standard article below its known standing price. They may even sell it at or below the cost to them. The idea is that by being that as a lure—by getting people into their store to buy that article—they will buy others.

But she buys only that article—and usually nothing else. She spends hours poring over newspaper advertisements to discover just such things. And she goes from one store to another, buying a stand and several toilet articles for 19 cents at one shop, a well-known $2 make of corset for $1.89 at another, and a much advertised 25-cent dress shield for 19 cents at still another.

That the few cents saved do not compensate for the time spent and the wear, tear on herself and clothes, is a point of view she never takes. By going to one good store and buying everything there she could get through in an hour the purchases she spends a whole day in making. And she would pay only a little more.

But the greatest absurdity of this woman's inconsistencies is that when she reaches home, worn out by her day's thoughts, she telephones for a servant girl to come at once to help her with her housework.

Easter Holidays Call Society People Away to Their Country Homes

Mrs. Horatio N. Slater and her daughter, Miss Slater, have been in New York over the week-end, and have been stopping at the Hotel St. Regis. While they may prolong their stay in the metropolis until the close of Easter week, they will probably return to town again before leaving for Bar Harbor, where Mrs. Slater and her two youngest children have arranged to spend the coming Summer. The young members of the Slater family are Morris Slater—named for his grandfather, the artist, William Morris Hunt—and Miss Ray Slater, who is soon returning from Europe. The two older Slater children, Miss Esther Slater and her brother, Nelson, are to go abroad in June with their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hull, who will spend the greater part of their time abroad in automobile tours through out the Old World's most interesting and historic scenes. Morris Slater and Nelson Slater usually spend part of their long vacations at the mills in Wennecott, which they will inherit from the Slater family and will in time come to manage. The property has been in the family for a full century and a quarter.

"The Easter holidays in the country seems to have been the sentiment that found society all last week for the opening of another week whenever a general and most unprecedented exodus to the country homes took place. At the fashionable country homes preparations have been underway for the opening for the season, or Berkshire residence and making it ready for occupancy of the Lenox society contingent.

Mr. and Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby and two children are in West Manchester for the Easter recess, having arrived during the week.

* * *

Other Hosmanians who have been in the country over the week-end are Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Fabens of Commonwealth avenue and West Manchester. They have been at their bungalow in Buzzard's Bay with their two sons and two daughters, Eleanor, Edith, Everett and Wright Fabyan.

* * *

Miss Marian C. Codman has given orders to have the work on her new residence on Bellevue avenue, Newport, started this week. This undoubtedly means that Miss Codman herself will be on the grounds early and she is expected during the first week in April. During the present season she will occupy the cottage which is now on the grounds, but will have it torn down as soon as the new villa is ready for occupancy. The new house will be of stone, as will also the new stable on the estate.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Codling are among those who have had their West Manchester estates open for week-end visits. They have had frequent parties of the same for week-end visits of late, and have had with them Mrs. Codling's sister, Mrs. H. G. O. Colby.

The Gold Dust Twins are not happy unless busy. They want more work—your work. Why not give them a trial? Gold Dust is a necessity in every well-regulated home—it's a time-saver and labor-saver.

The economy of Gold Dust is its efficiency. A little of the powder does so much—goes so far. Other powders and cleansers may look the same, may be advertised to do the same, but there's a big difference in actual results. Gold Dust stands alone among washing powders, and nothing can successfully take its place.

Do not use Soap, Naphtha, Borax, Soda, Ammonia or Kerosene with Gold Dust. Gold Dust has all desirable cleansing qualities in a perfectly harmless and lasting form. The Gold Dust Twins need no outside help.

STAMPS WORTH $25,000 STOLEN

RICHMOND, Va., March 28.—Professional yeggmen during the night drilled the safe of the Richmond postoffice, using what is known to them as the "plunger and screw" method of gaining entrance to the immense double-door safe, and carried off between $25,000 and $30,000 worth of stamps. As far as known no money was secured. The robbery was not discovered until 7 a. m. to-day.

A wagon was used by the robbers to take the stamps away from the building.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

COPPER UPSETS STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, March 28.—Free selling of stocks in Wall Street today resulted in declines of from one to nearly three points in the standard issues. Copper shares were under the heaviest pressure with Amalgamated showing a loss of 2⅞ points; Anaconda 2⅝ points, and Smelters 2½ points.

The weakness of the copper stocks unsettled the balance of the list and losses of a point were recorded by Steel, Union Pacific, Reading and several other active issues. Specialties were weak in sympathy with the standard issues and a decline of a point was recorded in the most active Norfolk and Western last two points.

COPPER LIST HAS BAD START

STATE STREET, March 28.—Copper stocks had a bad forenoon. Another $15 break in the price of Granby mining shares and continued selling pressure to Arizona Commercial, which took the price off 4¾ points more, proved disastrous to sentiment. Weakness was also apparent in the new Lake Superior issues, with Lake off 2¾ points, Indiana 4½ and North Lake almost 3 points.

There were no new happenings over the Easter holiday except that the stock market last week caused considerable margin money to be called by the brokers' loans with the banks were, in many cases, disturbed by the heavy declines, Granby in particular.

The Wall street list opened steady at close to last Thursday's final. There was no London market to take the lead from. Unfavorable crop news and labor troubles here still prominent features affecting the security market. The Supreme Court decision in Washington to-day so that Wall street did not have the usual Monday morning shivers.

Manufacturing stocks were the weakest features of the New York list. Westinghouse broke 4½ points on an unconfirmed rumor that the coin may was to make another stock issue. General Electric lost 2 points in sympathy. Amalgamated ran off in sympathy with the weakness of copper and lost 1⅞ points. Anaconda lost 2⅝, Smelters 1½, Tennessee Copper 1½, and Utah Copper lost 2½.

Railroad stocks were heavy but declines were confined to fractions for the most part. Reading, Rock Island and Union Pacific fell a point or over.

HARVARD VIEW OF FOOTBALL

With the object of reducing to a minimum the possibility of physical injuries, and of making football a more open game for the benefit of the spectators, by tying up the game with many technical possibilities, the Harvard Crimson, publishes to-day an article considering what has been done and what remains to be done.

"The committee has not yet really given any definite form to the revised game of football," says the Crimson. "The question of keeping the forward pass which is the very life of the whole situation, has not been settled at all.

"It is generally recognized that mass play and the 'driving inside' have been responsible for most accidents, and if the committee has succeeded in doing away with these dangers it has accomplished much.

"If the defensive ends and tackles can be prevented in some way the forward pass should be kept as an excellent way of opening up the game. If this is done, the penalty for an unsuccessful pass should be removed. The work of the committee so far is well considered."

LAUD MYERS ON "EASTER HATS"

Husbands who heard the Rev. Cortland Myers preach in Tremont Temple yesterday are endorsing today the pastor's denunciation of extravagant Easter hats. Many wives and unmarried girls who were in the audience approved and applauded Dr. Myers' statements.

He said in part:

"There are some who come to church on Easter Sunday merely to display their Easter hats, having shunned the church for the rest of the year. It would be better for them to stay at home Easter. If I knew who you were I'd pick you out and send you home.

"I must protest against the desecration of Easter by extravagant display of dress. A parade of dress and society has been going on in New York today that is a mockery and a desecration of the day which we are religiously observing. There is also a parade of this kind in Boston.

"In order to make a showing to-day women have been running in debt for Easter hats. I see there are some men here who have to pay those bills."

Your Chance Is West—

You can get a 160 or 320 acre farm free in Montana—but you'll have to hurry. Along the Great Northern R'y are several million acres of government land available under the homestead laws. The soil has proved remarkably fertile, producing 30, 35 and 40 bushels of wheat to the acre—proportionate yields of other grains and root crops.

MONTANA ranks first among the states in the yield per acre of wheat, oats, rye, barley and potatoes. In Eastern Montana, the Milk River Valley, Judith Basin Country, Great Falls District and Pertile Flathead Valley you can get free land, cheap land, irrigated land, fruit land and grazing land. Rocky Boy Indian Lands, 1,400,000 acres—very fertile—soon to be opened. The rush is on—thousands are going this Spring. Don't delay. Send for Free Montana Opportunity Bulletin.

"Nothing Succeeds Like Circulation"

The Circulation of the

Los Angeles Sunday Examiner

Is Now More Than

102,000

COPIES

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15th, 1910.

M. F. Ihmsen, General Manager of the Los Angeles "Examiner," first being duly sworn, deposes and says that he has examined the circulation records during the period between January 1st, 1909, and March 13th, 1910, and that the detailed statement in every respect and showing that the circulation of the Sunday "Examiner" is now more than 100,000 is true and correct.

W. J. Hindson, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that he is and has been preasman of the Los Angeles "Examiner" beginning January 1st, 1909, and that he has furnished the Circulation Department with more perfect copies, after deducting all spoiled and waste, than this detailed Sunday circulation statement shows.

The latest triumph of the fastest-growing newspaper in the fastest-growing section of the United States.

Even a year ago a circulation exceeding 100,000 for any paper in Southern California was excluded from the most sanguine dreams of the greatest optimists.

When, in a strongly competitive field, one newspaper surpasses all others in volume of circulation, it means all that big bank clearings, numerous real estate transfers and building permits mean in the matter of the general growth of the community. It also means that that newspaper is a better newspaper than its competitors, and that it is better liked than its competitors.

Whatever the cause of this greatest circulation, the fact is of the deepest interest to advertisers, because to them it means the best selling medium, and that means business to advertisers.

The adjoining table shows the average gain, month by month, during the year 1909, and the gain, week by week, this year. As you read it over, remember that these figures represent actual circulation—not "press runs." All spoiled and waste copies are deducted.

The advertiser who aims to reach the people of Southern California, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico MUST—if he hopes for complete success—use the Los Angeles "Sunday Examiner."

WINNERS IN THE "FORTY IMMORTALS" CONTEST PICK OUT "LIVE ONES"

The prize winners in the AMERICAN'S latest contest, the "Forty Immortals—Live Ones," were announced in yesterday's SUNDAY AMERICAN. For the benefit of those who did not receive the Sunday edition, the list is reprinted below.

The Winners.

Winner of first prize of $10, G. Wallace Stone, No. 44 Pleasant street, Brookline.

Winner of second prize of $5, Max Henry Newman, of No. 24 Davis street, Boston.

Winners of next five prizes of $1 each: Jessamine Porter Purdy, No. 35 West Green street, Lynn; Arthur B. Nield, No. 13 Stockton Hall, Cambridge; William F. Bowes, No. 30 Belmont street, Somerville; George A. Nelson, No. 224 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown; Miss M. E. Fuller, No. 225 Lexington street, East Boston.

Each one will be sent a set of the ten prize winners, and any failure to receive them promptly should be reported to the Cashier's office, Boston American.

The proposition of the manner in which the ten prize winners were made was:

Who do you consider are the forty metropolitan Boston men, NOW LIVING, whose achievements entitle them to places in a Hall of Fame.

In this contest women were not eligible, though it is of course admitted that there are a number of Boston women who would be awarded honors in Boston's Hall of Fame—if there were one.

In making their report and announcing the prize winners in this novel contest, the judges stated:

All Had Weak Points.

"We find that there is not a single list, in all the hundreds submitted, that could not have been improved. There are weak points in every list.

"But those which we have chosen come nearest to combining the living pre-eminent men of Metropolitan Boston, and are hardly are entitled to the prizes.

"The judges, if present, in place of their own, would exclude some of those included in the prize winning list, and would certainly include some men of great achievement who are not mentioned in those lists.

Men of Achievement.

Following are the lists which the judges of this contest considered to be the best submitted:

"Live ones" Editor:

I herewith submit my choice of the forty immortals for the hall of fame:

Big Piano Bargains

EVERY MAKE

Are you thinking of buying a piano of some special make —a piano that has a good reputation that every-one knows is a first-class make? If you are, you are just the person to whom we wish to say—"Don't pay too much for it." You will be asked a good round price for it unless you get it of us. We are in no trade or financial combination to keep the prices of pianos up—the name of a piano means much—it guarantees the instrument—but when the piano gets to our sacrifice floor the name is not considered. When we cut the price we cut all alike—and we cut deep. You buy while we cut.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 28, 1910

National Conservation of Human Life

Even the "Regulars" and the "Insurgents" Can Agree on This Proposition

Six hundred thousand people die every year in the United States of diseases that are preventable and that could be suppressed by public action.

Five million people fall sick annually from such causes, losing time, strength, courage and we[illegible]

It is estimated that the annual economic loss to the country from needless sickness and death cannot fall far short of three billion dollars.

Such statements are vouched for by experts who have made exhaustive investigations under the auspices of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Medical Association.

The latter organization has had a national convention at Chicago this month with delegates from thirty-six States and from the United States Army and Navy and the Public Health and Marine Hospital services.

It reiterated in urgent resolutions the demand that it has been making for nineteen years, that the government shall establish a department of public health, to be presided over by a Cabinet official, and to be empowered with the authority of the other great departments of the National Administration.

It is unnecessary to say that the American is in favor of such an establishment, for that has been said many times before.

But the American now takes occasion to observe that in the midst of the futilities of the present Congressional session there is a great opportunity for public service that no Republican or Democrat, no regular or insurgent, should be willing to miss.

THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH SHOULD BE PROVIDED FOR BEFORE THE ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.

The Chicago platform of the Independence Party made the clearest pronouncement for this new department. But the other national platforms of 1908 committed themselves to the proposition. And the country is a unit on the subject.

The United States has an annual death rate that runs about seven in a thousand higher than that of New Zealand and some other countries.

It may be that this difference cannot be wholly bridged by sanitary science authoritatively applied or inculcated by the federal government. BUT THERE IS THE HIGHEST MEDICAL OPINION THAT IT CAN BE.

The success of the government in reducing the perennial plague of yellow fever to an absolute zero in the city of Havana furnishes a vivid illustration and confirmation of this claim.

The Panama Canal project would be put well nigh out of bounds of practicability if it were not for the sanitary measures that the government has taken to banish devastating fevers from the isthmus.

Bubonic plague is endemic in several places on the Pacific coast, because the existing Bureau of Public Health—absurdly established in the Treasury Department—was too weak to enforce the necessary quarantine regulations to prevent the introduction of the deadliest of all diseases.

An epidemic of the black plague can be prevented and the existing epidemic of the white plague can be checked and finally suppressed by the institution of a department of public health armed with all the powers of national authority.

The movement for the mobilizing of all the energies of science and civil law for the saving of the lives of the people is an undertaking so primary in importance that another generation will be at a loss to explain the tardiness of such an effort.

THE CONSERVATION OF HUMAN LIFE SHOULD HOLD THE FIRST PLACE IN THE MOVEMENT FOR THE CONSERVATION OF NATURAL RESOURCES.

Insurgency in Boots and Nightcaps

And Now Cannon Is Behind Bomb-proof Earthworks

The insurgents in the House have missed their chance of leading the revolution for representative government.

The new Rules Committee, as originally planned, was to be an impregnable line of defence against legislative despotism.

It is, indeed, a formidable fortification.

BUT THE NEW COMMITTEE WAS CAPTURED BY THE CANNON FORCES.

IT WILL AFFORD THEM AN UNEXPECTED REFUGE IN THE STORM—A STUBBORN INTRENCHMENT AGAINST THE INDIGNATION OF THE PEOPLE.

Thus the reform of the House turns out to be bogus. Dalzell and his Republican associates on the Rules Committee are as Cannonical as Cannon himself—or more so.

And Cannon has gained by the transaction—through an apparent effacement of his repellent personality.

His cause has been made corporate and impersonal—and so is a good deal harder to hit.

The new Committee of Ten is Cannon's bomb-proof.

This is the due reward of an insurgent movement that fights in the morning and apologizes in the afternoon; an insurgency that wears boots and a nightcap, and that insurges on half-time.

The people will have none of it. The events of the week are convincing enough that the political uprising of the country must not wait for Congressional leadership.

THE PEOPLE WILL DO THEIR OWN INSURGING.

The despotism of monopoly will need more bomb-proofs than can be found in Washington.

And if there were a thousand Cannons and Dalzells, they would call upon the hills to cover them before the people of the United States are through.

FOR THE COUNTRY IS AT THIS MOMENT IN THE MIDST OF A POLITICAL REVOLUTION WHOSE LIMITS NO MAN KNOWS.

She Tenk She Ban Funny Faller

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"Ay see dar ban a blizzard yesterday in Manaota," said Steena, rudely breaking into a conversation in the midst of the dinner party. "My cousin ban writing me it ban a bad storm. Yes-salem, blizzards in Nort Dakota and Manaota ban awful tenge. Yu can't see yure nose in front of face.

"Ay remember one time Ay ban up in Moorhead, Manaota, and one of dese hat blizzards ban coming up. Ay yust——"

"That will do, Steena," said my wife. "You are not here to lecture on North Dakota. Go out and get the roast."

"I yust ban getting roast now, from ya," said Steena. "Ay tenk dat ban a purty gude joke. Ay tenk Ay ban a funny faller, vat ya tenk?"

"Bring the roast, please," said my wife.

When Steena came in with the roast, it looked as much a frost as the blizzard she had been describing.

"Steena is a very good girl," said the embarrassed wife, "a very faithful servant, but she has much to learn in the matter of cooking roasts."

"Ya ant got anyteng to learn in matter of roasting cooks," said the indignant Steena. "Ay ban going to yoin Salvashun Army ef yu talk dis bar vay to me. Ya ban got no right for talking so. Ay can't stand for it, Gudeby!"

"Oh, please, Steena, don't go without giving me notice. You know that my husband and myself think the world of you. You know that we liked you the moment you set foot inside our door. You know that there was something in your manner that possessed a certain charm."

"Ay don't caring for hot air," said Steena. "Gudeby!"

"You are an all right girl, Steena," I ventured. "You are earnest and sincere in your work, and do the best you can for our comfort. We couldn't think of missing such a jewel of a servant."

"Ay ant ban a jewel," said Steena. "Gudeby."

"What an impudent creature," said one of the women guests. "I couldn't bear to have her in my apartment."

"Ay s'pose dar ant any room in yures apartment for more than yu and yure husband," said Steena. "Ay s'pose yu ban in one of dese bar flats, yust big enuff for yu peopul and yure hats. Ay know yu, kind of fallers, because Missus Yenkins ba telling me all about ya. She say to me, 'Steena, Missus Green ban a short sport. She ban always coming har and eeting, and Ay never heard of any dinner parties she ban giving me.'"

And that broke up the league.

"Steena," said my wife the next morning, "I don't think I shall require your services after the first of the month. You talk too much."

"Val," said Steena, "Ay ban just lak Eva Tanguay. Ay don't care. Ay don't care. Ay ban going right avay and packing up my tengs. Gudeby!"

"I said after the first of the month," my wife reminded her.

"It ant vat yu say," cried Steena. "Like dis actor faller, Maester Varfield, say, of yu don't vant me, somebody vants me. Gudeby."

But Steena will return. I am sure of that.

A Guide to the Professions

By WEX JONES

TELEPHONE GIRL—Among the qualifications demanded by some of the companies are:

Height.	Rosy Complexion.
Health.	Good nature.
Even temper.	Cool head.

Frankly, any one possessing these qualifications should not trouble to enter this profession, but would be more usefully employed in making happy some lucky husband.

SONG WRITER—The main object of a song writer is to make money—for a publisher. To be a successful song writer all that you need do is write successful songs. This sounds simple enough, but when you try it the matter appears more difficult. The latest success, "When You Think That You're Thinking You Ain't," was written in ten minutes on the back of an envelope. However, if you write another song in the same time on the back of another envelope it doesn't follow that yours will be equally successful. "The Whippoorwill Is Looking for Its Whip" was dictated over the telephone to a one-eyed stenographer, but if you try the same plan you may only succeed in failing. From this you will gather that there are no definite rules to follow if you want to achieve success in this profession, and the only way to do is just write.

OFFICE BOY—To become a good office boy it is necessary for a youngster to spend all his early years in diligent preparation for the position. Never, except when eating, must the boy stop whistling in the most piercing tone he can command. When he has perfected this and acquired the necessary endurance to whistle without stop for eight hours he is ready to go to work.
